THE LATEST.

That Louisville merchants are perennial agents of optimism and the Courier-Journal is their medium has been abundantly shown in each Sunday issue of this paper during the past few months. Last Sunday the advertising space used by the Louisville merchants was far in excess of the amount taken on the same Sunday a year ago. This morning there will be found in the Courier-Journal more advertising than has ever before been placed except in some special edition. All of the advertising came voluntarily from the merchants, who recognized in the Courier-Journal the medium through which to reach more discriminating buyers with an ability to enjoy their opportunities than is presented by any other newspaper in the South. At no time in the history of the paper has its circulation been so large nor its ability to serve its advertising patrons been so comprehensive.

An armed and masked body of men captured Hopkinsville yesterday morning about 2 o'clock, and after severing connection with the outside world and holding the police and firemen captives, set fire to three tobacco warehouses, one belonging to the trust, one independent, and a third containing Association tobacco. All three were destroyed. The invaders brutally beat a buyer for the trust and shot and perhaps fatally wounded a brakeman on the Louisville and Nashville railroad, who was trying to save a burning car. A posse followed the raiders and fought a running battle with them. Acting on an appeal from the officials of the city, Gov. Beckham ordered one company of State militia to the scene. Two of the raiders may have been wounded, one by a citizen of Hopkinsville who fired into the crowd, and the other in the battle with the posse.

Up to 9 o'clock last night twenty-five bodies had been brought to the surface from mines Nos. 6 and 8 of the Fairmont Coal Company, at Monongah, W. Va., where an explosion occurred Friday. Only a small portion of the two mines remain to be explored and this is being pushed as rapidly as possible. It is believed that a large number of the bodies will have been brought to the surface by daylight.

GARDNER-PATTERSON

ENNESSEE'S GOVERNOR MARRIED IN UNION CITY.

Leaves With His Bride On Brief Trip To New Orleans—At Home After December 12.

Nashville, Dec. 7.—[Special].—The marriage of Miss Mary Russell Gardner and Gov. M. R. Patterson was solemnized at 2 o'clock this afternoon in Union City, in the presence of an assemblage of relatives and intimate friends.

The ceremony was performed by Gov. Patterson's brother-in-law, the Rev. Sterling J. Foster, of Birmingham, the home of the bride's parents. Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gardner, and the stylish old-fashioned house made an ideal environment. It was decorated with chrysanthemums and American Banners. The bride was given away by her father. She wore a blue tulle suit with white silk hat and carried a sheaf of white chrysanthemums. Her sister, Miss Leonora Gardner, acted as maid of honor. Miss Mary Swigart played the wedding music and Robert Gordon, of Helena, Ark., sang. Several States were represented in those attending the wedding, the bride's brothers, R. E. W. and F. D. Gardner, of St. Louis; the groom's mother, Mrs. Josiah Patterson, of Memphis; his brother and sister, Mrs. E. B. Lancaster being among the number. A number of Nashville friends and State officials went from here.

There was no formal subsequent reception, as the Governor and his bride, with many of the guests from a distance, left almost immediately. After a brief wedding trip to New Orleans, Mr. and Mrs. Patterson will be in Jackson on December 12, where he will deliver an address and they then return to Nashville to be at home in the gubernatorial mansion.

Among the presents were a magnificent silver bowl from the Governor's staff and a chest of silver, the gift of State officials.

HARLAN CAN'T COME

HAD HOPED TO WITNESS WILLSON INAUGURATION.

Mr. and Mrs. Willson To Leave For Frankfort To-morrow Afternoon—Will Be Well Attended.

Gov.-elect Augustus E. Willson had hoped that his old law partner, Justice John M. Harlan, of the United States Supreme Court, would be able to attend his inauguration, which the venerable jurist had looked forward to, but yesterday Mr. Willson received a letter from Washington, which stated that it would be impossible for Justice Harlan to come to Kentucky Tuesday. In the same letter Justice Harlan stated that the Kentucky Society wanted the Governor-elect to speak at its annual dinner in New York on December 23, but Mr. Willson will have to decline the invitation.

Mr. Willson spent only a few hours at his office yesterday morning. In the afternoon he went out for recreation. McKenzie Todd, his private secretary, went to Frankfort yesterday afternoon where he will be busy until Tuesday making preparations for the inauguration, as stated, Mr. Willson and Mrs. Willson will leave for Frankfort at 2 o'clock to-morrow afternoon. At the same time many prominent Republicans in the city will leave for Frankfort, the having engaged rooms at the Capital Hotel. Col. Albert Scott, chairman of the late Republican State Campaign Committee, said that the Campaign Committee would keep open house at the Capital Hotel Monday evening and Tuesday.

The Governor-elect said yesterday that he was not able to announce his Adjutant General. The announcement will not likely be made until to-morrow after Mr. Willson arrives in Louisville.

Record-Breaking Fur Sale.

$30,000 Stock Sacrificed.

Unfavorable weather and other unlooked-for conditions have played havoc with the fur business this fall. While we know that cold weather will be here shortly, we are unwilling to hold our stock longer, and inaugurate to-morrow a reduction sale on Fine Furs that will mark an epoch in local selling.

We made up unusually large assortments in the various popular furs for this season, and are, as a result, terribly overstocked.

The prices we now quote in many instances do not represent the real value of the skins alone. This sale presents a rare opportunity to secure Christmas presents of genuine merit and make a handsome saving besides. The following prices proclaim eloquently the magnitude of this event.

HARAHAN TAKES ISSUE

DECLARES FISH KNEW TRUST COMPANY'S CONDITION.

Former President Charged With Depositing Illinois Central's Funds In Insecure Bank.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—(Special.)—President Harahan, of the Illinois Central, was today shown a copy of the report from New York that Mr. Fish had sent a circular to the stockholders dated December 6, 1907, in which among other things Mr. Fish made the following statements:

"As to the deposits in the Trust Company of the Republic, I need not repeat that at no time has it been in circumstances of failure, much less bankruptcy."

Mr. Harahan, on being asked what he had to say on the subject, said:

FIRST GRIDIRON CLUB ROAST OF THE SEASON IN WASHINGTON

President Roosevelt, Vice President Fairbanks and Other Prominent Men Targets For Jokes, Songs and Stories.

Washington, Dec. 7.—The Gridiron Club began its winter season of fun-making dinners by a lively entertainment of 200 men, prominent in politics, diplomacy and business. There was not a moment without jest, song or satire, and there was not a jest, song or satire that did not hold up for the amusement of all some one of the guests present.

To begin with, when President Samuel Blythe it up the huge electric gridiron in the spacious and sumptuously appointed banquet hall of the Willard Hotel, the absence of the preliminary cooking was emphasized. Vice President Fairbanks bore the brunt of this stunt, for in front of him stepped a gridironer and sang a ditty about an Indiana dinner where cocktails were served with subsequent regrets. Mr. Fairbanks was then allowed to draw of butter-milk.

A class in nature-faking through questions and answers developed a logical connection between "Octopus" and "Wall street. Also if it is true that money talks "President Roosevelt must be the richest man in the world."

John Barrett ain't broke," remarked one of the class. The story that George Washington threw a dollar across the Potomac was declared not to be a native tale, because Secretary Cortelyou had thrown $200,000,000 to Wall street. A song which put Secretary Cortelyou in the attitude of quietly waiting to be called to the presidency brought laughter, likewise a response from the Secretary.

Jests Aimed At White House.

"Why are the ships going to the Pacific?" was answered in many ways, chief among which was to seat Secretary Metcalf in the Senate. A Japanese wrestler, a game of dice, and an aggregation of "undesirable citizens" were all jests aimed at the White House, and were produced with much merriment. The new State of Oklahoma made its appearance with Democratic Senators and Representatives and an electoral vote for Bryan. Chairman New, of the Republican National Committee, was requested "to think it over," and then pronounced in on hobby horses a squad of equestrian-tested army officers.

We will now drink to the next President of the United States," announced President Blythe, after he had got to their feet Vice President Fairbanks, Speaker Cannon, Secretary Cortelyou and Senator Knox. Then was sung a ditty, which conjured with the names of all the presidential possibilities. A song followed which gave great admiration to the versatility of Ambassador Bryce, but kindly warned him that with it all he would be found wanting unless he learned the presidential game of tennis.

Another song told that Johnson, Minnesota's Democratic Governor, had met Bryan face to face and therefore he no longer had a presidential boom. The menu souvenir was a collection of clearing-house certificates issued by authority of the Gridiron Club Clearing-house Association. There was a certificate for each course, and each set forth a bit of humor.

The initiation as a member of the club of James P. Hornaday, correspondent of the Chicago Tribune, was also made a matter of entertainment.

Those Present.

The guests of the club included:

Vice President Fairbanks, Speaker Cannon, Secretary Cortelyou, Postmaster General Meyer, Secretary Wilson, the Japanese Ambassador, the British Ambassador, Secretaries Beveridge, Bourne, Brown, Burnett, Crane, Jeff Davis, Dixon, Felt, Foster, Guggenheim, Hammon, Johnston, Kittredge, Knox, Lodge and Paynter; Representatives Burke, Cushman, Dalzell, Foss, Langley, Lowden, Madden, J. FORGED NAMES TO PAPERS FOR PARDON

ATTEMPT MADE TO SECURE RELEASE OF MURDERER.

DEAD MAN'S SON'S NAME SIGNED TO LETTER TO GOVERNOR.

WILL PROSECUTE THE GUILTY.

Somerset, Ky., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—Lyne Arnett, of Nicholasville, a clerk at the New Cumberland Hotel at this place, has learned of an attempt to have the murder of his father, Ben F. Arnett, pardoned by a forgery of his name, the name of Lecher Saunders, teller of the Citizens' Bank of Nicholasville; the names of nine of the jurors who convicted the slayer, and other various names of prominent and influential citizens of Nicholasville and Jessamine county.

The Farmer was convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary about a year ago for a term of twenty-one years for the murder of B. F. Arnett, a wealthy farmer of Jessamine county. Secretary of State McChesney says a typewritten letter has been filed, signed by Lyne Arnett, son of the murdered man, stating that he asks for the pardon, and that his father was a dangerous man. Mr. McChesney said that there was a letter asking for the pardon signed by Lecher Saunders, and that with the papers filed by Mr. Holliday, asking for a pardon, was a petition signed by many men.

Arnett here to-day sold all the papers and the letters signed by him were forged.

The Secretary of State says the papers were filed on December 5, and that Gov. Beckham had not as yet taken up the case nor examined the papers. Dr. Lee Caspell, of Lexington, a half brother of B. F. Arnett, the murdered man, and George Lyne, of Nicholasville, a brother-in-law of Arnett, were worried about the matter at once, and they are doubtless in Frankfort by this time.

Lyne Arnett, who owns the farm managed by the Kentucky Safety Vault and Trust Company, of Lexington, says he will prosecute the guilty persons to the end. He left here this morning for Nicholasville, and from there he will go to Frankfort.

For a pardon, was a petition signed by many men.

GOVERNOR REFUSES TO SIGN CONTRACT

FOR ERECTION OF STATUE TO LATE WILLIAM GOEBEL.

MAJORITY OF COMMISSION ACTS OVER HIS PROTEST.

HIS REASONS MYSTERIOUS.

Frankfort, Ky., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—By a vote of 3 to 1 and one member absent the Goebel Monument Commission to-day signed a contract with Nelhaus, the New York sculptor, to be placed either within or just outside of the new Capitol building, and according to the vote of the commission to-day, the statue will occupy a position on the lawn directly in front of the main entrance to the building.

Just why Gov. Beckham should not want to sign the contract could not be learned to-night, but when his action became known he was subjected to much criticism, especially by the friends of Goebel. The act appropriating $20,000 for the erection of a statue of Goebel in the new Capitol building was passed by the Legislature of 1904, and named the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Auditor, Treasurer and Attorney General as the commission to have charge of the work and award the contract. When the commission met to-day at the new Capitol building to confer with Artist Nelhaus, who came on from New York to submit a contract, every member was present with the exception of Attorney General Hays, and when it came time to sign the contract Gov. Beckham protested against the making of a contract at this time and refused to attach his signature, whereupon Lieut. Gov. Thorne, Auditor Hager and Treasurer Bosworth, all of whom are members of the commission, signed the contract together with Nelhaus, and the contract was let over the protest of the Governor.

It was the belief of the members of the commission who awarded the contract that it was time the work should be started in order that it can be finished by the time the new Capitol is completed, and besides the awarding of the contract to Nelhaus for the statue the commission also designated Andrews & Co., the architects of the Capitol building, to have charge of the architectural work and to see that it is finished in a manner appropriate for the building it is to grace and the site it is to occupy.

It was said to-night that Gov. Beckham felt that the awarding of the contract should be deferred until after the Legislature convenes in order that the body could name another commission to continue the work, but as the act creating the fund expressly says that the commission shall consist of the Governor, Lieutenant Governor, Auditor, Treasurer and Attorney General it is held by the friends of the late Gov. Goebel that the duty would naturally fall to those five officials of the incoming administration, and that the three members who voted to award the contract to-day only carried out the law as laid down by the Legislature.

It is claimed that the Governor recently told Arthur G. Goebel, who would not sign the contract until later, but as he would not be a member of the Commission at that time his action is held by the friends of the murdered man to whom seat he succeeded after the assassination.

CUMMINS SAYS BRYAN WILL RUN CLOSE RACE.

Chicago, Dec. 7.—"The next presidential election with William J. Bryan the candidate of a united Democratic party—and indications are that such will be the case—will be closer than we have had for some time," said Gov. A. B. Cummins, of Iowa, in a discussion of political affairs here to-night. "There is no doubt of the outcome, of course, but the race will be well worth watching."

The Governor declared that President Roosevelt will not allow his name to be presented to the Republican National Convention. He refused, however, to express an opinion as to the probable candidate.

PITTSBURG LOAN SHARKS RAIDED BY DETECTIVES.

Pittsburgh, Dec. 7.—In an effort to drive from the city the concerns that advance money on furniture and other articles of the household, charging exorbitant rates, city detectives raided the offices of nineteen of these money lenders to-day and have warrants for eleven others. All are accused of violating a city ordinance, it being alleged they are doing a loan business under a mercantile license.

ANTI-TAGGART

Scott Is Running For Chairman of District.

RACE HAS NO REFERENCE TO JUDGE ZENOR, HE SAYS.

ELIJAH HENSON FOUND DEAD IN BED.

WAS WELL-KNOWN FARMER.

Prof. Samuel L. Scott, of Jeffersonville, who is opposing Mark Stoen, of Scottsburg, for chairman of the Democratic Central Committee of the Third Indiana congressional district, said yesterday that the impression that had gone out that he was running in the interest of Judge W. T. Zenor or any other candidate was a mistake. He said it was a well-known fact that he had been a loyal friend to Judge Zenor, but so far as he knows Judge Zenor is not asking anything from his party, and the has not been approached on this line. Prof. Scott said that he had become a candidate for chairman in the district for the whole party in the district.

So far as he knew, Prof. Scott said, there was not any fight now on for the congressional nomination, and the subject had not been brought up. He said he favored a reorganization of the Democratic State Committee and thought some one else should be at the head of it excepting Thomas Taggart. He continued and said he wanted it understood distinctly that if he was elected district chairman he would vote against the election of Thomas Taggart for re-election as State chairman.

He strongly opposed to injecting congressional matters into the election of a district chairman, said Prof. Scott, "but I believe the position should be filled with reference to the fitness of the choice for the discharge of his duties as a member of the Democratic Central Committee and district chairman."

Pursuant to the call of Mark Stoen, district chairman, the Democratic Central Committee of Clark county, yesterday issued a call for the Democrats of Clark county to meet in mass convention in Jeffersonville at the City Hall at 1 o'clock on Saturday, December 28, for the purpose of selecting delegates to the district meeting to be held in New Albany on January 2. Originally the intention was to have township mass conventions, but under a letter dated December 5, 1907, Mr. Stoen says that since sending out the notice for Democratic mass conventions to select delegates to the district convention he has concluded the method is not practical and would be a departure from the usual custom of selecting delegates to the convention. As the State Committee, he continues, by resolution decided delegates must be selected by primary or convention, he has decided that the county mass convention in which delegates would be most satisfactory. Acting under this call has been made by Prof. Scott.

Found Dead In Bed.
By telephone yesterday morning Promin M. Coats, Coroner of Clark county, Ind., was called from Jeffersonville to Hamburg, ten miles northwest, to hold an inquest on Elijah Henson, who was sixty-seven years old and had been found dead in bed several hours before. It was found he had died of angina pectoris, although he was apparently in good health on Friday and chopped wood all day. He complained several times of shooting pains in his left side. At a supper he ate heartily, and, as was his custom, retired about 8:30 o'clock.

A son returned home on Friday after going gone for a time. Mrs. Henson spoke to him and he replied he was made. She then noticed he was not breathing and went to the bed where he was to find he had already begun to breathe, rigid and had evidently been dead for some time, although it was not known how long it was after he retired until death came. Besides his wife, Henson is survived by three sons. The funeral will take place this afternoon at 2 o'clock and the burial will be at Six Mile Switch.

NOTES OF THE NEWS FROM JEFFERSONVILLE.

Mrs. Mary Gray, of St. Augustine, Fla., who has been on a visit to Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Gray, 212 Ohio avenue, left yesterday for her home.

An epidemic of tonsillitis is prevailing in the city and a large number of persons are ill of the disease. In some instances whole families are sick, the old suffering the same as the young.

The Rev. W. F. Lloyd, pastor of Morton Memorial church, will officiate at both services to-day, and the evening will continue the series of sermons on "The Burden of Sin."

The school in District No. 11, Charles-town township, over which there has been a contention for some time, has been reopened by James N. Tappan, trustee, on a writ of mandamus, and the school is in charge.

The Rev. J. M. Vawter is still too ill to fill his pulpit at the First Christian church, and it will be occupied this morning by the Rev. T. B. Porter, of New Albany, and tonight T. J. Brock will deliver an address.

Charles W. Myers Asks $10,000 of Traction Company.

Charles W. Myers, by his attorneys, Paris & Trust, of St. Louis, Mo., and Weathers, filed suit yesterday in the Floyd Circuit Court, New Albany, against the Louisville and Southern Indiana Traction Company to recover $10,000 as damages on account of the killing of his son, William A. Myers, which occurred October 29, 1907, near McCulloch's Station, a short distance east of New Albany. The plaintiff alleges that the son was killed by a car of the company, which was running on the tracks on which he was riding, and that the car was under the control of the company.

He paid a high compliment to the ability of Mr. Gompers as an organizer and expressed himself as highly sensible of the work done by him within the functions allotted to him as a labor leader, and as the president of the American Federation of Labor, he did not believe that union men as American citizens would ever accept a dictatorship over their votes. That if he were a craft worker he would ally himself with a trades union, because unionism has been the vehicle of progress toward better conditions for the wage-earner, and while his fealty toward organized labor would not waver if he was affiliated with it, he, as an American, would hold his franchise above the right of any leader to position.

He said he knew that in some things Mr. Gompers misrepresented the two million men, composing the organization which he leads, and that he (the speaker) had proved this by appealing to the people from Mr. Gompers' position. He said that in his latest re-election, there was cast for him a larger union labor vote than ever before in his political life.

BEST OF PROOF

That Hyomel Will Cure All Forms of Catarrhal Diseases.

Testimonials could be printed by the thousands, many of them from Louisville and nearby towns, that Hyomel is an absolute cure for all catarrhal troubles, but the best proof of its unusual curative powers is the guarantee that T. P. Taylor & Co. (Incorporated) give with every outfit that they sell, "Money back if Hyomel does not do all that is claimed for it."

Hyomel is not a secret remedy. Its formula is given freely to physicians who want to know what they use when they prescribe Hyomel. It is guaranteed under the Pure Food and Drug Law by serial No. 1418.

By breathing Hyomel, the healing medication goes directly to every nook and corner of the air passages where the catarrhal germs may be lurking, and the patient is cured. To be convinced of this you have only to give it a trial, remembering that if it does not cure, T. P. Taylor & Co. (Incorporated) will refund your money.

There is no dangerous stomach drug here. Get an outfit to-day. Hyomel is breathed through a little pocket inhaler a few times daily, and almost immediately a great improvement is noticed and quick recovery follows.

The complete Hyomel outfit costs but $1.00, and in most cases is sufficient to cure the disease, making it not only a scientific treatment, but one that is highly economical.

Get it to-day from T. P. Taylor & Co. (Incorporated) if you have any symptoms of catarrh, and see how quickly the remedy relieves and cures.

BURSUM CORDA. BY PATRICK KING. In Memory of Mrs. Stella Ouerbacker Sherrill, Who Departed This Life December 7, 1907.

Lift up your hearts! Your griefs disband! Rejoice! She is not dead! "I am the Resurrection and the Life!" the Saviour said.

When Death's bright angel's tender hand On golden hearts and true Is gently laid, their spirits grand Rise glorious anew! He leads them swift and sure away O'er Saturn's crimson crest, Above the flaming orb of day Past worlds on worlds at rest.

Beyond the rosy birth of dawn, The gloomy gifts of night, By glowing planets, on and on, Within the Blessed Light, Before the Great White Throne, To Jesus, Shepherd of the Fold, In splendor with Him own.

Lift up your hearts! In Heaven, now While choirs of angels sing! She wears the crown upon her brow Of those that serve the King.

Mrs. William Heaton.

The last funeral rites for Mrs. William Heaton were conducted Friday at 2:30 p. m. when the body was buried in a beautiful spot in Cave Hill in her husband's lot. Mrs. Heaton died Saturday, November 30, after a long illness of bronchitis and pneumonia. She was 65 years of age and a long life of usefulness, both as a wife and mother. BLUE SUNDAY IN NEW YORK

Even Y. M. C. A. Entertainments Are Tabooed.

Football and Outdoor Games To Be Stopped.

It Covers Roller Skating and Likewise Benefits.

"LID" ON ALL AMUSEMENTS.

New York, Dec. 7.—A "blue Sunday" is promised New York to-morrow, a literal enforcement of an old but not seriously regarded statute, under a new interpretation, will deprive New York's millions of any form of public entertainment and put them upon their own resources for amusement for twenty-four hours at least, and perhaps for many Sundays to come.

Orders for a strict enforcement of Justice O'Connor's recent decision in regard to the closing of all places of amusement on the Sabbath were issued to-day by Police Commissioner Bingham, and all New York will go home to-night to await its first experience with a Sunday without its accustomed amusements.

No Y. M. C. A. Entertainments.

Commissioner Bingham's orders to eighteen inspectors, who were called together to receive instructions, call for a rigid enforcement of the law, and clamps the cover of strict suppression on all forms of amusement, from vaudeville to the Sunday evening entertainments of the Young Men's Christian Association.

Theatrical managers and showmen stated to-day that they propose to obey the mandate of the law, believing, they say, that its strict enforcement will do more than anything else to effect its modification or repeal at the coming session of the Legislature.

The only places in Greater New York where bright lights will shine and wheezy pianos beat out a defiance to the police will be in Brooklyn. The managers of five moving picture shows and a skating rink have secured temporary injunctions restraining the police from interfering with them to-morrow and Commissioner Bingham told the Brooklyn Inspector that the injunctions must be obeyed.

Mr. Bingham's Orders.

Commissioner Bingham, in delivering his instructions, said that the Sunday-closing order prohibited everything in the way of a performance or entertainment and that the rule extended to dancing academies and to dance halls. The Commissioner said to the inspectors:

"Now that order and that decision mean simply the stopping of any public entertainment or performance of any character in a place of public amusement on Sunday."

"And it won't be often that you will have to exercise any discretion at all; all performances of any character in a place of public amusement is the way the decision reads. Now, that covers Carnegie Hall as well as the one and five-cent vaudeville and moving-picture shows, it covers roller skating and it covers benefits. The Y. M. C. A. entertainments on Sunday nights are performances in a place of public amusement and, while they are run for the purpose of getting boys and young men off the streets, under the decision it is so. It cuts out the Educational Alliance with their little arrangement that goes on Sunday nights because it is a place of public amusement."

Hotels Undisturbed.

Commissioner Bingham said the music in hotels and restaurants was not to be disturbed. He said that the law was to be enforced on the outskirts of the city, where it has been the custom to play football and other outdoor games. The six-day bicycle race, which was scheduled to start at midnight to-morrow, will not commence until 1 o'clock and the doors of Madison Square Garden will not open until after midnight.

The Sunday closing law has been long on the statute books, and bitter and wide have been the contentions over its interpretation. The police have never been quite certain how far they might proceed in closing the various forms of entertainments, though it was generally held that performances in which the actors and actresses appeared in costume were within the meaning of the statute and should not be permitted. Not long ago a police inspector made arrests following a production of Rossini's "Stabat Mater" at the Metropolitan Opera-house. The case was decided against the police, but it did not make clearer the limitation of the statute.

"Lid" On In Cleveland.

Cleveland, O., Dec. 7.—While there have been no Sunday theatrical performances allowed in Cleveland for several years, the "Penny Arcade" and street shows that have existed by surffiance here will be closed to-morrow. In addition, Chief of Police Kohler has issued orders further tightening the closing of Sunday saloons and kindred resorts.

CITY FEATURES.

F. M. Tiller Opens Attractive Piano Store at Fifth and Walnut Sts.

That success is reached by the road that lies in fair dealing is exemplified in the case of F. M. Tiller, the piano dealer, who has just moved into new quarters at the corner of Fifth and Walnut streets. Five years ago Mr. Tiller started in business on his own account in the Lederhans building, at Sixth and Walnut, and in this period has built up one of the largest piano trades in the State. Operating out of the high-rent district on an economical basis, without agents, Mr. Tiller has given his customers the benefit of unprecedented low prices and easy terms on the high-class pianos he sells, which has found favor with the buying public.

His progress has been steady and sure, and his new move is into quarters where he can continue to expand and develop.

A magnificent array of carefully chosen pianos from the foremost factories of America—such is the exhibition to which Mr. Tiller invites his customers at his new and attractive warerooms.

No Closing In New Orleans.

New Orleans, Dec. 7.—There will be no Sunday-closing of saloons in New Orleans to-morrow, according to a statement from the Louisiana Liquor League. The liquor dealers announced themselves as openly fighting the Sunday-closing movement on the ground that some of the saloon men depend entirely on Sunday business for their profits.

CITY FEATURES.

F. M. Tiller Opens Attractive Piano Store at Fifth and Walnut Sts.

That success is reached by the road that lies in fair dealing is exemplified in the case of F. M. Tiller, the piano dealer, who has just moved into new quarters at the corner of Fifth and Walnut streets. Five years ago Mr. Tiller started in business on his own account in the Lederhans building, at Sixth and Walnut, and in this period has built up one of the largest piano trades in the State. Operating out of the high-rent district on an economical basis, without agents, Mr. Tiller has given his customers the benefit of unprecedented low prices and easy terms on the high-class pianos he sells, which has found favor with the buying public.

His progress has been steady and sure, and his new move is into quarters where he can continue to expand and develop.

A magnificent array of carefully chosen pianos from the foremost factories of America—such is the exhibition to which Mr. Tiller invites his customers at his new and attractive warerooms.

No Closing In New Orleans.

New Orleans, Dec. 7.—There will be no Sunday-closing of saloons in New Orleans to-morrow, according to a statement from the Louisiana Liquor League. The liquor dealers announced themselves as openly fighting the Sunday-closing movement on the ground that some of the saloon men depend entirely on Sunday business for their profits.

To-morrow you can come here, select a fine one, one that he or she will be well pleased with, and save enough on the purchase to buy one or more other Christmas gifts.

Representatives In Congress
Choose Seats.

LUCKY ONES CHUCKLE WHILE UNFORTUNATES "CUSS."

MRS. LONGWORTH WEARS SOME HANDSOME GOWNS.

KENTUCKIANS IN WASHINGTON

[Correspondence of the Courier-Journal.]

Washington, D. C., Dec. 8.—Congress has come upon us for another engagement. The seats of the mighty have all been settled upon—in two senses. Now these lawmaking ladders of ours are awfully "choicive" as to their corporal location throughout the session in both legislative chambers. Everybody likes to be well up front, not far from the bald-headed row, perhaps five or six seats from the stage, and as close to the middle aisle as possible. That's the best vantage point for catching the Speaker's eye readily, and for seeing what's going on all around. In the House the chairs all revolve on a pivot. All "Congressmen" in the colloquial incorrect sense which applies the term only to Representatives, are thus "Sons of the Revolution," when there's aught to be rubbed at in the rear of the landscape. The chairs are solid and solemn in the Senate, like the Senators themselves. Senators take themselves mighty seriously, so much more seriously than we do.

Now, it follows obviously, that with 386 Representatives to be placed in position, few men in the lot can have their "duties"—their topographical preferences. The distribution of seats is therefore left to blind luck. The drawing of places occurs every two years upon the opening of every new Congress, when there's a grand shuffle and a general new deal in the House. It is an interesting performance, and this is the way the thing works. With the making of the roster of every new Congress, each man of the 386 members of the House has his numerical tag, determined by the alphabetical sequence of the letters of his name. Every man is quick to know his own number. He is on the hop when it's called. After the Speaker and the leader of the minority and lesser officers have been decided upon, and conducted into the hall with great pomp and circumstance, the Representatives who have been seated at random without thought of party line, are called up in batches of ten or so, and sworn in in alphabetical order according to States. The play then proceeds to empty benches, the seats pre-empted left vacant, the recent occupants lounging along the circumference aisle, until each is summoned to select his place. Three hundred and eighty-six numbers numbered in sequence, a marble for each man, are placed in a box. The Clerk of the House selects a little page, elated the small chap so distinguished above his eager fellows, blindfolds the boy with a handkerchief, and sets him to pulling out marbles at random, one by one. The Clerk announces in stentorian tones each number the page presents to him. The Representative answering to that number walks up briskly and takes his pick of the vacant seats, occupying it until the chamber is filled, the Republicans and Democrats nearly divided. Little pages, or aspiring pages—because their jobs are not as dignified as the members of the House—the formed—the busiest small boys in the world, on the jump like bell-hops, eager to show their efficiency—as each man is located in the best possible seats left to him—rush up and attach a brass name-plate to the mahogany desk in front of each member. In the end, the members are seated as firm as the Rock of Gibraltar, as long as he was in the House. General Blount, General Grosvenor, of Ohio, remained fixed before the same desk as certain venerable Congressmen, or those otherwise deserving of peculiar consideration, the members who draw cool $75 a month and no questions asked. My! it must be nice to be a small boy and not going to school, my masters! And no minding the baby at home, or splitting the kindling. But it's about as easy to go through the eyes of a camel—as that Scriptural?—as to be appointed a page. Page appointments are among the perquisites and emoluments of children of congresses and things of that sort. Pa must needs have a power of pull, or be a mighty rooster for the better of the favor to get Johnny on to the job. There was the usual scramble for seats this week by spectators in the gallery, as there is always every other year at the opening of each new Congress. At the beginning of every term, since the demand for gallery accommodation is so much greater than the supply, visitors are admitted only by special cards of invitation, issued to the elect by the elected. Each Congressman is supplied by the Sergeant-at-Arms with only two tickets to be bestowed upon his dear five thousand friends. One has to do some lively engineering to be "among those present" on opening day, therefore.

A Tradition Inviolable.

There are certain sentimental traditions, however, even to callous and calculating Congress. Thus it is an unwritten law, observed inviolate, that the two leaders of the House, the leader of the majority and the leader of the minority, in the case of the Sixtieth Congress as well as the last, respectively the Hon. Sereno E. Payne and the Hon. John Sharp Williams—shall have the first choice of seats, each man in his own ballroom. In individual cases certain venerable Congressmen, or those otherwise deserving of peculiar consideration, the members who draw cool $75 a month and no questions asked. My! it must be nice to be a small boy and not going to school, my masters! And no minding the baby at home, or splitting the kindling. But it's about as easy to go through the eyes of a camel—as that Scriptural?—as to be appointed a page. About the Pages.

An alert, good-looking bunch of small kiddies—all in knee trousers, some of them hardly out of Buster Brown suits—are the Congressional pages, the messengers of the members who draw cool $75 a month and no questions asked. My! it must be nice to be a small boy and not going to school, my masters! And no minding the baby at home, or splitting the kindling. But it's about as easy to go through the eyes of a camel—as that Scriptural?—as to be appointed a page. Mrs. Longworth Looks On.

Upon that auspicious occasion this week Mrs. Longworth sat in the front row of the Speaker's gallery, beaming down upon the gleaming pate and the solitary pearl scarpin of her legs. She looked very slight and girlish in a simple tailor suit of her own Alice blue, which she is loth to abandon. Her hat was a black toque with black peacock feathers, tipped in gold, and a white garden. Her hair was fastened at her neck with a big black bow. She wore a black lynx stole and white gloves. Seated beside Mrs. Longworth was her merry sister, Ethel, curiously matrimony that day in aspect for her seventeen years, in a voluminous milk coat with pink toque. The costume made the schoolgirl appear older than the young matron.

Gardenias From Mexico.

Treasured trophies from the Root-Grant wedding, on the part of a number of the guests at the biggest nuptial affair in Washington in several years, are the gardenias which came to the bride ten thousand strong from Mexico by special messenger, which, after the ceremony, were distributed to some extent among the intimates of the household. They were the bridal gift of the son of President Diaz of Mexico and his wife. The gardenia is the favorite flower of the new Mrs. Ulysses Grant the Third. It figured prominently in her bridal nosegay.

The smart brown velvet gown that Mrs. Nicholas Longworth wore to the wedding—Mrs. Longworth and Mrs. Roosevelt were both in brown studies—had long sleeves, reaching quite to the hands. Bare-footed elbows have got to go, dear girls—no use in kicking against the pricks. Mrs. Straus and others also wore long sleeves.

Mrs. Dewey, vivacious, bird-like, petite, was a French model in sapphire blue tulle, with white broad satin coat—the whole garment elaborately embroidered in self color.

Mrs. Longworth has gone into the gayeties of life again at the Capital with her old vivacity. She is a motor car expert through much diligence and experience, and she is a most electric runaway, with her perfect sang froid, usually accompanied by some of the handsomest and most expensive toilettes in a cloth in the fashionable London smoke shade, with a wide, trimmed felt hat, in similar shade, and two stiff wings shading into red, sprouting backward, like handles, at each side of the front. Mrs. Longworth was staying in the White House and her long pearl earrings at the first big dinner party of the season at the White House.

Mrs. McCreary Grows Better.

Senator McCreary is making his headquarters for the present at the Ebbitt. Mrs. McCreary, who has been so seriously ill, is convalescing at a sanitarium in Baltimore prior to her joining her husband in Washington. Senator Payne has been stopping at the Riggs. Representatives W. F. Kimball, of the Seventh Kentucky, and Harvey Helm, of the Eighth, both debutantes of the Sixtieth Congress, are located at the Congressional Hotel, near the Capitol. Representative McManley has been stopping at the Raleigh. Hon. Ollie M. James is at the Riggs. Mrs. James will join him after the holidays.

Mrs. Robert Harper, of Sixteenth street, an old friend of Senator and Mrs. Payne when the former was here in Congress, will shortly give a dinner in their honor. Mrs. Harper is one of the fashionable women of the capital.

Very delightful visitors to Washington this week were Mrs. and Mr. Brown, of New Albany and Louisville, whose home this winter is at the Seabach. Mrs. Brown was Miss Helm, a sister of the late Hon. Harvey Helm, of the Eighth. Mr. and Mrs. Brown stopped here en route to New York to be present at the capital when Mr. Helm took his oath of office on Monday. They were among the notable spectators in the gallery on opening day. During their sojourn at the New Willard Mr. and Mrs. Brown have been enjoying many of the social recreations of Washington.

On Diplomatic Business.

Mr. James D. Hamlin, of Texas and New Mexico, formerly of Louisville, with his beautiful young wife, who was Miss Nichols, of Missouri, has been in Washington this week on diplomatic business, which included calls upon the President, Cabinet officials and Senators. Mr. Hamlin, a man of great physique and personality, went West, impelled by the zeal for a strenuous career, immediately after his graduation from the law at Lexington, never pursuing the ministerial calling.

Among the entertainments given to Mr. and Mrs. Hamlin during their Washington stay was a smart little dinner at Harvey's by Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Nichols, formerly of Midway.

Gen. Franklin Bell, of Shelbyville, and his wife dined at the White House a few days ago. Mrs. Bell, formerly Miss Sallie Buford, of Illinois, who spent much of her girlhood in Frankfort, is a frequent hostess at her home at the Highlands at bridge and other smart affairs. Gen. and Mrs. Bell attended the Grant-Pool wedding, at which the officiating clergyman was the Rev. Herbert Shipman, of New York, once of Lexington, son of a former rector of Christ Church, the old Church Cathedral. Mr. Shipman was chaplain at West Point during the cadet days of Lieut. Grant.

Miss Mary Sutherland, at the same wedding, was most picturesque in a white Marquisette gown, embroidered in gold, with a huge white hat draped in yellow plumes. The Misses Big Piano Sales Being Made.

MONTENEGRO-RIEHL MUSIC CO.

(Incorporated)
628-630 FOURTH AVENUE,

HAVE A BIG WEEK'S BUSINESS
OWING TO GREAT REDUCTIONS OFFERED THROUGH REDUCED PRICES.

Entire Line of Pianos of This Big Firm
Is Being Offered at Substantial Reductions --- Cheap Pianos Are Still Cheaper---Medium-Grade Instruments Selling at Cheap-Grade Prices, While High-Grade Instruments Are Sold at Prices of Medium Grades.

There is nothing known to the commercial world that calls forth a quicker response from intending buyers than "Bargain Prices," once the intending buyer has confidence that the Bargains are genuine.

Think of securing such world-famous Pianos as Chickering & Sons, Decker & Son, Haines Bros. and Sterling at greatly reduced prices.

The firm has gone straight through their entire line (which is said to be one of the best-balanced lines of pianos carried by a single firm in the United States) and marked every new piano upon their floor at a price that simply covers the cost of the instrument with economical selling expense added. In other words, the profit, to which every merchant is entitled in payment for his time and personal efforts and upon the money he has invested, has, for the time being, been completely put aside.

As an evidence of this, these examples are given, to which anyone familiar with piano values can attest:

New Upright Pianos, worth $250	- - $168
New Upright Pianos, worth $300	- - $188
New Upright Pianos, worth $350	- - $268
New Upright Pianos, worth $400	- - $325

In the firm's second-hand and slightly used stock are many good instruments at greatly reduced prices. These the house are selling with an understanding with the buyer that he may exchange for a new piano within one year's time should he wish.

In the Player Department there are several Piano Players in excellent playing condition being offered at $100, $125 and $150, upon terms to suit.

A special bargain is one $650 Player Piano, that will be sold to the first one that wishes it for $475.

The monthly payment plan can be had on any Piano purchased during this sale.

Miss Moore, of Georgetown, Ky., has been with her husband, Mr. J. A. Moore, completing a six month's sojourn at the Jamestown Exposition, at Willoughby Beach, where she and Miss Margaret Martin, of Midway, and Miss Margaret Martin, of Midway, were hostesses at the "Kentucky Cottage," where they were guests from the Bluegrass State found such a hearty welcome.

Find's Many Old Friends.

One of the interesting men of Kentucky who has come to Washington, is Mr. George L. Willis, of Shelbyville, who early made a record of brilliancy in journalism in his home State. Mr. Willis is associated with his friend, the Hon. Harvey Helm, as secretary. He is renewing old acquaintances at the capital and making other friends galore. He humorously claims that his chief Kentucky colony were in the fact that he is "Ruth Stanton's husband," his beautiful wife having been a celebrated Kentucky belle, one of the daughters of the late "poet laureate" of the Bluegrass State, Maj. Henry T. Stanton, of Frankfort.

Mrs. Canada Rodman, of Louisville, who spent a portion of last season in Washington, has returned to the capital, where she is the guest of her relative, Maj. Sutherland, and his family. She is a member of the congressional couple, Representative and Mrs. J. A. Hughes, of Huntington, originally of Ashland, Ky., have been entertaining as house guests at their home at 405 Burlington some attractive schoolgirls from West Virginia. Members of the Kentucky colony were included in the bridge and theater parties and other entertainments at which Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were frequent hosts.

Miss Juliette Howard, of Lebanon, has been constantly entertained during her visit to Washington friends at the Highlands.

Miss Emily Elliott is an attractive Kentucky girl most feted here of late. She is the guest of her cousin, Miss Lucinda Carpenter, Penneshaker, who gave a handsome luncheon in her honor at the Highlands.

Mrs. Berry is a very popular young woman from Louisville, who is visiting as house guests at their home at 405 Burlington some attractive schoolgirls from West Virginia. Members of the Kentucky colony were included in the bridge and theater parties and other entertainments at which Mr. and Mrs. Hughes were frequent hosts.

Recent Kentuckyans in Washington have been W. S. Helm, Henry Kern, R. W. Woods, Edward M. Kraft, Charles E. Knapp, all of Louisville; Mr. W. M. Scott, of Shelbyville; C. F.

NOT BOUND BY PRIMARY

Holdover Senators Excluded
By the Call.

Only Members Not Then Elected Mentioned.

Thirteen Democrats Free To Vote As They Please.

OFFICIAL RULE LAID DOWN.

Free and untrammelled by any obligations, fictitious or otherwise, thirteen Democratic Senators will vote in the contest for United States Senator at the coming session of the General Assembly, and these thirteen men will have the balance of power. These men, who are free from any alleged ties, are the thirteen Senators who were not elected at the last November election, but who hold over by virtue of a four-year term, for which they were elected in November, 1905.

These men are specifically and distinctly eliminated from the primary, under the official call which was issued on June 13, 1907. The call, as regards the legislators who are elected at the November election, 1907, will be called upon to elect a United States Senator, who will take his seat March 4, 1909. In another place the call says: "The Democratic party in Kentucky be given an opportunity to say for whom they wish their legislators to vote for United States Senator, and this opportunity should be given them before their legislators are nominated and elected."

This call specifies that the nomination for United States Senator should be made before the legislators are nominated and elected. Yet the thirteen Democratic hold-over Senators were already elected and they could not be bound by any primary, even if the primary which was held was legal, which is exceedingly questionable, to say the least.

"There is no possible question on this score," said one of the hold-over Senators. "We are no more bound by that primary than if it had never been held. We were already members of the Senate of Kentucky, elected and qualified. We were and are free agents, and we can and will vote as we desire in the election for a United States Senator. That primary is not legal and not binding on any member of the Legislature, but even if it was accepted as binding, for the sake of argument, on those members not elected when the primary was held, it cannot be held binding on us, who were already elected, before they even thought of a primary."

It is known that four or more of these Senators, feeling that they are not bound by the snap primary, will vote against Gov. Beckham and will try to elect some other Democrat who is more popular with the people of the State. The fact that six of these Democrats would have been beaten for re-election had they stood for election in their districts at the election on November 7, shows that the people of their districts are not for Gov. Beckham for United States Senator. The falling off in the Democratic vote in those districts is construed to mean that the people in those districts wanted Gov. Beckham beaten; and would have voted against sending to the State Senate Democrats who might vote for him for the senatorship.

The following is the call for the primary, as it applies to the United States senatorship:

Whereas, there is a growing sentiment in the country over in favor of selecting United States Senators by popular vote, and the Legislature of Kentucky having repeatedly called upon the national Congress to amend the Constitution as to permit Senators to be selected in this way, thus clearly demonstrating that this plan is favored by Kentuckians;

Whereas, the Democratic party in several of our sister States has selected its nominees in this way, and the plan wherever tried having met with general favor and given entire satisfaction, it is now the sense of this committee that the Democratic party in Kentucky be given an opportunity to say for whom they wish their legislators to vote for United States Senator and this opportunity should be given them before their legislators are nominated and elected. The legislators who are elected at the November election, 1907, will be called upon to elect a United States Senator who will take his seat on March 4, 1909. Therefore, be it

Resolved, That the primary election be held in the various voting precincts under the general primary law, in that part of Kentucky on Tuesday, the 8th day of November, 1908, between the hours of 9 a. m. and 5 p. m., standing time for the purpose of nominating a Democratic candidate for United States Senator, the term beginning March 4, 1909, and the various State officers to be filled at the general election of November, 1907.

GROCERS WANT GARNISHEE LAW FOR KENTUCKY.

Newport, Ky., Dec. 7.—Over six hundred letters were received to-day by the secretary of the Newport Retail Grocers' Association in response to a proposal to form a State organization to secure what they consider needed legislation. Several days ago 2,000 letters were sent to grocers in all parts of the State asking them to join.

The claim is made that grocers are without protection since the repeal of the garnishee law. The organization will appear before the Legislature and urge the re-enactment of the law in a modified form.

Pawnbrokers Are Alarmed.

Two-thirds of the pawnbrokers of Louisville have appealed to us to stop the sale of LOCIAS DIAMONDS. The reason is plain: LOCIAS DIAMONDS so closely resemble the real that they are readily pawned for ten, fifteen and twenty times their real value. Five shrewd Louisville pawnbrokers and loan agencies to our personal knowledge have repeatedly suffered losses of this character, and they were selfish enough to ask us to destroy our business because it plied the same purpose as the real. The poor as well as the rich may wear diamonds.

Our Unchallenged Guarantee.

We positively guarantee every LOCIAS DIAMOND to retain its original brilliancy and luster forever, and the mountings to wear for twenty years. We will give $10,000 to any charitable institution that may be designated if it can be shown that we ever refused to replace any stone that failed to give perfect satisfaction or was otherwise than as represented. LOCIAS DIAMONDS will stand all tests of acids, heat, alkali, etc., and, in fact, may be washed and cleaned like ordinary diamonds. LOCIAS DIAMOND CO.

DO NOT CONFOUND

LOCIAS DIAMONDS with so-called Rhinestones, Barrios, Emily, Remo, Montana, Brazilian, Smithsonian, or, in fact, with any other imitation diamonds, regardless of what the name may be. LOCIAS DIAMONDS are the only stones that have ever been discovered that cannot be detected from a diamond. All others are simply manufactured from chemicals.

FRANK G. CARPENTER TELLS OF TALK WITH GOVERNOR.

COUNTRY SAID TO BE ONE OF GREAT POSSIBILITIES.

MINERALS NOW UNEXPLOITED.

By FRANK G. CARPENTER.

KHARTOUM, Nov. 22.—I am just back from the palace, where I have had a long talk with Sir Francis Reginald Wingate, the Sirdar of the Egyptian army and the Governor General of the Sudan. The Sirdar is the ruler of the Sudan, a country one-fourth as large as all Europe, and four times the size of any principality in it excepting Russia. He has more power than the Czar, and he can do almost anything as to his country and people. One of the chief officers in the wars with the Mahdi and the Khalifa, he won decoration after decoration for his bravery and military services, and was in command of the operations which resulted in the death of the Khalifa in 1899. It was in that year that he took possession of the country as Sirdar and Governor General, and since then he has been bringing order out of the chaos of this part of Africa. He has pacified the warring tribes, has turned their lances and guns into plowshares and shepherd's crooks, and is now creating civilized conditions where have always been barbarism, injustice, slavery and war. An explorer of note before he became Governor General, he has now his prospectors traveling through every part of this vast region, and is laying out and starting the railroad, canal, irrigation and other movements which will open it up and make it one of the live parts of the world.

The Sirdar is now in his prime. He has seen perhaps fifty years of hard-working life, but he does not look over forty-five, and were it not that his hair and mustache are mixed with silver, one would think him much younger. His face is free from wrinkles and his complexion rosy; his eyes are full of light and his whole appearance indicates health and strength. A great part of his career has been spent in the saddle. He has not only traveled over the most of Egypt and the Sudan, but has gone on diplomatic missions to Abyssinia, and now holds close personal relations with King Menelik and his leading officials. The Sirdar spends a part of every year traveling by boat or on camels through the several of his far-away provinces, and he has just recently returned from a long trip in Kordofan. He talks freely about his country, and he knows it so well that what he says is interesting.

An Undeveloped Empire.

During my conversation with his Excellency I asked him something as to the possibilities of the Sudan, saying that most people looked upon it as nothing else than a vast desert. He replied:

"That idea comes largely from the bleak and barren sands through which the railroad takes travelers on their way to Khartoum. They have also read of the immense swamps of the upper Nile, and, putting the two together, they look upon the country as only swamp and desert. The truth is the Sudan is an undeveloped empire as to its material resources. It is a land of many climates and of all sorts of soils. The desert stops not far from Khartoum, and beyond that is a region where the rainfall is sufficient for regular crops. Still further south the country has more rain than is needed; and in the west are great areas fitted for stock rearing.

"Take, for instance, the country along the Abyssinian border and that which lies between the White and Blue Niles. Those regions have been built up in the same manner as Egypt; and they contain all the rich fertilizing materials while have made the lower Nile valley one of the granaries of the world. The only difference is that the Egyptian soil, by the cultivation and watering of thousands of years, has been leached of its best fertilizing elements; while the soil of the Gezireh, as the region I have referred to is called, has hardly been touched. Indeed, the plain between the White and Blue Niles is so rich that, if water is put upon it, it will produce four or five crops every year, and that for many years in succession. We have millions of acres of such soil; and they only await the hand of man to bring them into the world's markets as live commercial factors."

"What kind of crops can be raised in that country, your Excellency?" I asked.

"Almost anything that is now produced in Egypt," was the reply. "The Gezireh is already growing a great deal of durra, a millet whose seed forms the chief food of the natives. It produces an excellent hard wheat and also maize. As it is now, that plain is the chief granary of this part of the world. It raises so much that, when the season is good, the crops are more than the people consume, and at such times the grain is stored away in great piles. I have seen durra pits forty feet deep, and about fifty feet in diameter. They are to be found about almost every village; and, at ordinary times, are kept full of grain for fear of a famine. While the Mahdi reigned his soldiers robbed the durra pits, and the result was that whole communities were wiped out by starvation.

"But if the bad years eat up the good ones, where is the Sudan to get its grain for export?" I asked.

"That will come by irrigation and better transportation. As it is now the people rely upon the rainfall, which is not sure. In the future, that country can be irrigated by the two Niles, and that without diminishing the supply of water required for Egypt. Then the land will have water all the year round. Improved methods of cultivation will enormously increase the crops. At present the native merely walks over the ground after a rain and stirs it up with a stick, while his wife or child comes behind dropping the seeds and covering them with their feet. After planting nothing is done until two months later, when the crop is ready for reaping.

"As to transportation, everything is brought to the river on donkeys or camels, which eat their heads off on the way, and it has to come down the Nile on boats at high freight. We hope to soon build a railroad into the Gezireh, which will give it an outlet to the Red Sea; and there will be other roads branching off from that, furnishing transportation facilities for the whole country."

"But is the region between the White and Blue Niles the only country you have where grain can be raised?"

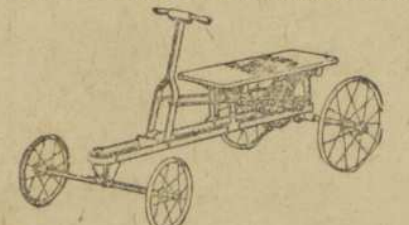

"By no means. We can raise grain in nearly every province. There are grain areas in the south and in the west. The Bah el Ghazal, an immense country on The Hopkinsville Outrage.

The descent upon the good city of Hopkinsville by an armed body of lawless men, emboldened by the absence of the lawful majesty of the State in that part of Kentucky, marks a fitting climax to the end of a State Administration which has for eight years made of Kentucky the worst governed State in the Union, culminating in a political revolution and the overwhelming defeat of the Democratic Ticket in the last election.

The Hopkinsville outrage is the inevitable outcome of the reign of intimidation and violence which has for years been unrestrained in the tobacco regions of the State. The warlike and fastidious destruction of property Friday night, the infamous assaults on person and life, the irresponsible and indiscriminate ory of the murderous mob, were the logical results of conditions which have long existed unchecked by the authorities, whose duty it was to destroy them, being no worse in kind, but only in degree, than many other outrages which have grown out of those conditions during the past year or two. Barns have been burned, plant beds have been laid waste, men and women have been whipped, shot and run out of the State, for no other reason than that they chose to attend to their own business, while self-styled "armies of peace" have paraded the country, threatening and bullying law-abiding citizens and ordering what they shall buy and what they shall sell. All of this has been in as flagrant violation of the law of the State as were the acts of Friday night, yet none who thus spat upon the law have been brought to justice. Local authorities, afraid or unable to do their part, were unsupported in any way by the State Administration, the head of which lifted neither voice nor hand against this cowardly perversion of kukluxism, but instead went up and down the night-ridden districts pecking their votes by stump heroes reulogizing Kentuckians as "the noblest people on earth."

In the game of politics which Gov. Beckham has played ever since he stepped from the Lieutenant Governorship to the higher office, he has neither by act nor influence done anything, until yesterday, to put down this lawlessness.
His political operations, embracing the strengthening of his machine by a notorious alliance with the lawless leaders of Hazzard in the mountains, were evidently conducted in a solicitude to avoid wounding the sensibilities of the night-riders in the tobacco counties, and he reaches the end of his term successful in that desire, for nothing that he could or would do now in the two days yet remaining to him could blot out the record of years which he has so carefully laid for himself. Pleading that he has been powerless to interfere for the local enforcement of the law in the tobacco regions—though he found ample power when in the interest of his political plans he deemed it expedient to interfere for the local enforcement of the law in Louisville—he has made this plea notwithstanding the plain letter of the statutes which invest him with authority to offer rewards and employ detectives for the apprehension of every man who has participated in any of these crimes of the night riders and day paraders. The people of Kentucky who have at heart the real interest and good name of their State contemplate with relief his exit from the Chief Executive's office two days hence.

Meanwhile they look to the authorities of Christian county to inaugurate a new era in the history of the "tobacco war" in Kentucky. Let there be an end to timidity and inactivity in the vindication of the law. According to statutes which they are sworn to enforce every man who was a member of Friday night's mob is a felon, who should be in the penitentiary, and it is the duty of the authorities and the people of Christian county—their duty to themselves and to their State—to send these men to the penitentiary.

A Political Saint Bartholomew.

The failure of the President to make any sign, or to utter any word, touching a third-term for himself in the White House when the members of the Republican National Committee stood assembled before him, is most significant.

In the case of a man so wedded to the theatrical and so loving dramatic effects the omission of such an opportunity might well cause surprise. But the situation is yet more serious. Considering all the attendant circumstances, Mr. Roosevelt owed something alike to the country and the occasion.

A single sentence would silence the buzzing and stop the still-hunt. If he thought it worth his while the night of his election in 1904 to go out of his way to make the declaration that he would consider the forthcoming term a second term, and believing in the rule established by Washington and followed by Jefferson and Jackson, that he would not be a candidate for a third term, how much more apposite and needful, in the event that he means to stand by that declaration, for him to repeat it now on the eve of a National Convention when his name is advanced before all others as the actual choice of his party, with important Republicans—some of them especially distinguished by himself—going about not only proclaiming him, but organizing to nominate him!

It looks very much as if the consensus of opinion among the Washington correspondents that he is a candidate and has been adroitly planning to produce conditions which will bring about his nomination and seem to force him to accept it, were true, and that, from now onward, each aspirant will have to reckon with this man-in-the-closet ready to burst forth at the sounding of the signal-bell for the pre-arranged onslaught upon the candidates now in the field.

Man proposes, God disposes. It may be the will of God that the Republican party shall be destroyed by Third Termism as the Democratic party was destroyed by Free Silverism, recreating out of the wreck of both a new party steering midway between the two, and equal to a patriotic and statesmanlike disposition of the transcendent issues which have arrived upon the scene. We cannot believe it the will of God to destroy the Republic; to end, whilst yet in the mid-heaven of its trial trip, the upward and onward flight of the noble ship Liberty, with its priceless burden of institutional freedom; to loosen our Representative Government from its moorings, deeply laid in the oryxian law of the land and the hearts of the people, and to transform and reduce it first to the ignominy of the One-Man power in the person of a subtle and spectacular manipulator of party agencies, and then to political companionship with Mexico and South America, if not the hereditary Sovereignities of the Feudal World, from which our fathers separated us by the Declaration of Independence and the Constitution of the United States. We prefer to believe it the purpose of God, having destroyed the Democratic party, to destroy the Republican party.

That the professional politicians, whichever trademark they adopt, have become a menace to the country ought to be clear enough to the naked eye of observing people. They constitute for the most part a more or less idle and dissolute class, albeit, in the arts of corrupt combination, an indefatigable class. Everywhere they have made the machine all-powerful; the party Trust carrying the party label, all embracing. Woe to the individual man, however able and patriotic, who defies the existing order. In the larger cities, in the State Capitals, politics has become little else than an office-brokerage, its runners, patrons and expectants sufficing numerous when skillfully handed to marshal forces strong enough to make the predominant ego effective.

At Washington representative Government long ago gave place to ring-making Government, the party in power working through its Steering Committee in the Senate and the Speaker and his Rules Committee in the House, the President having more actual authority than any Constitutional Monarch in the world.

All that is required to establish Autocracy and Absolutism is the breaking down of the barrier set up by Washington and accepted by his successors and the people as a sacred tradition, and never in the history of the country has any man appeared in its public life so equipped for the work, so booted and spurred, as Theodore Roosevelt, in the event that he be once fairly mounted and seated in the saddle. Even as it is he has emulated most of the assumptions of the Man on Horseback save only the name of it. Given a Third Term, a Fourth and a Fifth, and in case he survived these, Life Tenure would not only come easy, but be matters of course.

The keen sense of Europe, hating us heartily, jealous of us not merely as a commercial rival but as a world power, and a world power built on Republicanism, perfectly understands this and would accept it as proclamation of the failure of Democratic institutions. The intelligence of America knows it well. No reasonable, reflecting man can doubt it. He who equivocates is either a blind man, or a self-seeking man. There is nothing in the pretension that Theodore Roosevelt is the one, only man in a Nation of eighty millions of people to be entrusted with a new lease of power, and the increased powers which that new lease will carry with it, to distinguish it from the claim set up for Caesar, for Cromwell and for Napoleon, to say nothing about Bolivar, Santa Anna and Diaz.

It means a Dictatorship. That the people, with their eyes wide open, will ever vote this, we do not believe. We are as sure they will not vote to Mexicanize the Government in 1908 as we were sure in 1896 that they would not vote to Mexicanize the currency. But party interest joined to party passion, however mistaken, are dangerous elements when political conditions are so much at sea as they now are, and, accepting the President's silence, as tacit permission for the Third Termists to go ahead and perfect their conspiracy, to have it ready to spring at the opportune moment in the National Republican Convention, those brave Republicans who love their country and their party, and are still true to Republican principles, will have to come out in the open and hustle.

In 1896 Mr. Cleveland dealt with the Democratic party much as Mr. Roosevelt is now dealing with the Republican party. Though his closest friend, Carlisle, the Secretary of the Treasury, was an aspirant, he could not be induced to speak, whilst Morton, another member of his Cabinet, was allowed to advocate for him a fourth nomination. Thus Mr. Cleveland held the Sound Money Democrats whilst the Free Silverites skinned them. Shall History, reversing its party complexion, repeat itself in 1908, with Taft, instead of Carlisle, as the sacrificial offering upon the altars of ambition and friendship?

A Central Bank.

The Academy of Political and Social Science held a special meeting in Philadelphia during the past week to discuss the financial situation. Distinguished financiers were invited, including Mr. Charles H. Treat, Treasurer of the United States; William B. Ridgely, Controller of the Currency; Mr. Jacob H. Schiff and Isaac N. Seligman, famous bankers of New York, and many others.

The main idea suggested at this writing was that of a central national bank as being the logical solution of the problem with which they had to deal. It was thought that such an institution alone could handle and distribute an asset currency such as it was thought Congress would authorize. It was said that the issuance of such a currency intrusted to the small banks all over the country would result in a financial cataclysm.

Mr. F. A. Vanderbilt, vice president of the National City Bank of New York, presided. In his address he said it was rather too early in the present crisis to draw beneficial conclusions with regard to it. We are still surrounded by abnormal conditions, and he was of the opinion that some time must elapse before we can look back with academic insight on the events of the present crisis. There ought not to be a difference of opinion as to the cause. The real causes run back half a dozen years, and are world wide, including the Boer War, the Russo-Japanese War, the San Francisco disaster and other catastrophes which have caused the expenditure of three billion dollars.

While most of the speakers mentioned the project of a central bank, they were not all equally explicit upon it. Mr. Seligman, who spoke more directly on this subject, said that he favored a central bank owned jointly by the Government and the national banks. He referred to the existence of such institutions in France, England and Germany, and said that America might well profit by the example of other countries in such matters. Such a bank, he thought, would bring certain and permanent relief. His idea was for a bank limited to transactions with the clearing-houses of the various cities. It would deposit funds with the clearing-houses and national banks against United States bonds and other approved securities as well as commercial paper and bankers' bills with proper margins. Had there existed such an institution, he thought, the forced closing of the Knickerbocker Trust Company would not have occurred, nor the needless run on other trust companies.

Mr. Seligman said that while the central bank should be owned jointly by the Government and the national banks, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Controller of the Currency should be represented on its board. The Treasury funds should be deposited with the central bank, and the Government bank should have power to issue notes in certain proportion to its gold reserve. As the sole right to the issue of notes would likely be opposed by the national banks, an alternative plan is proposed by which the Government bank is limited chiefly to transactions with the clearing-houses of the various cities.

While the speakers were generally well affected toward the idea of a central bank, their notions of what sort of a central organization ought to be established seemed to differ, and some of them were hazy. The contention that the existence of such a bank would have averted the recent panic, or the worst features of it, was not at all clear. That the central banks in foreign countries have in the main worked well may be conceded, but there have been the most alarming and far-reaching panics in these countries also. Moreover, none of the speakers seemed to favor an imitation with anything like exactness of the system in use in England, France or Germany. The idea that the central bank should have the exclusive right to issue notes was rejected, not because it was said to be set up for Caesar, for Cromwell and for Napoleon, to say nothing about Bolivar, Santa Anna and Diaz.

It means a Dictatorship. That the people, with their eyes wide open, will ever vote this, we do not believe. We are as sure they will not vote to Mexicanize the Government in 1908 as we were sure in 1896 that they would not vote to Mexicanize the currency. It means a Dictatorship. That the people, with their eyes wide open, will ever vote this, we do not believe. We are as sure they will not vote to Mexicanize the Government in 1908 as we were sure in 1896 that they would not vote to Mexicanize the currency. But party interest joined to party passion, however mistaken, are dangerous elements when political conditions are so much at sea as they now are, and, accepting the President's silence, as tacit permission for the Third Termists to go ahead and perfect their conspiracy, to have it ready to spring at the opportune moment in the National Republican Convention, those brave Republicans who love their country and their party, and are still true to Republican principles, will have to come out in the open and hustle.

In 1896 Mr. Cleveland dealt with the Democratic party much as Mr. Roosevelt is now dealing with the Republican party. Though his closest friend, Carlisle, the Secretary of the Treasury, was an aspirant, he could not be induced to speak, whilst Morton, another member of his Cabinet, was allowed to advocate for him a fourth nomination. Thus Mr. Cleveland held the Sound Money Democrats whilst the Free Silverites skinned them. Shall History, reversing its party complexion, repeat itself in 1908, with Taft, instead of Carlisle, as the sacrificial offering upon the altars of ambition and friendship?

A Central Bank.

The Academy of Political and Social Science held a special meeting in Philadelphia during the past week to discuss the financial situation. Distinguished financiers were invited, including Mr. Charles H. Treat, Treasurer of the United States; William B. Ridgely, Controller of the Currency; Mr. Jacob H. Schiff and Isaac N. Seligman, famous bankers of New York, and many others.

The main idea suggested at this writing was that of a central national bank as being the logical solution of the problem with which they had to deal. It was thought that such an institution alone could handle and distribute an asset currency such as it was thought Congress would authorize. It was said that the issuance of such a currency intrusted to the small banks all over the country would result in a financial cataclysm.

Mr. F. A. Vanderbilt, vice president of the National City Bank of New York, presided. In his address he said it was rather too early in the present crisis to draw beneficial conclusions with regard to it. We are still surrounded by abnormal conditions, and he was of the opinion that some time must elapse before we can look back with academic insight on the events of the present crisis. There ought not to be a difference of opinion as to the cause. The real causes run back half a dozen years, and are world wide, including the Boer War, the Russo-Japanese War, the San Francisco disaster and other catastrophes which have caused the expenditure of three billion dollars.

While most of the speakers mentioned the project of a central bank, they were not all equally explicit upon it. Mr. Seligman, who spoke more directly on this subject, said that he favored a central bank owned jointly by the Government and the national banks. He referred to the existence of such institutions in France, England and Germany, and said that America might well profit by the example of other countries in such matters. Such a bank, he thought, would bring certain and permanent relief. His idea was for a bank limited to transactions with the clearing-houses of the various cities. It would deposit funds with the clearing-houses and national banks against United States bonds and other approved securities as well as commercial paper and bankers' bills with proper margins. Had there existed such an institution, he thought, the forced closing of the Knickerbocker Trust Company would not have occurred, nor the needless run on other trust companies.

Mr. Seligman said that while the central bank should be owned jointly by the Government and the national banks, the Secretary of the Treasury and the Controller of the Currency should be represented on its board. The Treasury funds should be deposited with the central bank, and the Government bank should have power to issue notes in certain proportion to its gold reserve. As the sole right to the issue of notes would likely be opposed by the national banks, an alternative plan is proposed by which the Government bank is limited chiefly to transactions with the clearing-houses of the various cities.

While the speakers were generally well affected toward the idea of a central bank, their notions of what sort of a central organization ought to be established seemed to differ, and some of them were hazy. The contention that the existence of such a bank would have averted the recent panic, or the worst features of it, was not at all clear. That the central banks in foreign countries have in the main worked well may be conceded, but there have been the most alarming and far-reaching panics in these countries also. Moreover, none of the speakers seemed to favor an imitation with anything like exactness of the system in use in England, France or Germany. The idea that the central bank should have the exclusive right to issue notes was rejected, not because it was said to be set up for Caesar, for Cromwell and for Napoleon, to say nothing about Bolivar, Santa Anna and Diaz.

It means a Dictatorship. That the people, with their eyes wide open, will ever vote this, we do not believe. We are as sure they will not vote to Mexicanize the Government in 1908 as we were sure in 1896 that they would not vote to Mexicanize the currency. THE OPEN PULPIT

Episcopal Church Element
At Variance About It."HIGH" AND "LOW" PERSUASION
TAKE DIFFERENT ATTITUDES.SOME RECTORS ALREADY TAK-ING ADVANTAGE OF CANON.

TIMELY RELIGIOUS TOPICS.

What is termed "The Open Pulpit" is just now the topic of a lively discussion in the Episcopal Church, in which the "high" and the "low" elements are expressing views that are radically at variance. The discussion results from action taken by the General Convention of the Episcopal Church, at its Richmond meeting, which for the first time made it legal for men other than clergymen ordained by Episcopal bishops to make addresses in Episcopal churches. The present discussion centers around the intent of the canon adopted by the convention. Curiously enough, both the elements mentioned express approval of the canon, but they do not agree as to its intent.

There seems to be little doubt that the intention of the General Convention was to frame a canon which should permit ministers of other religious bodies, as well as laymen of the Episcopal and other churches, to make addresses in the church on special occasions. Part of the wording of the canon is: "Nothing herein shall be so construed as to prevent the bishop of any diocese or missionary district from giving permission to Christian men who are not ministers of this church to make addresses in the church on special occasions."

Many leaders in the Episcopal Church claim that this is perfectly clear and means just what it says. Ministers of other denominations are not "ministers of this church" and neither are any laymen. There is one criticism which holds that ministers of the Episcopal Church are discriminated against the element of the Episcopal Church. But it is pointed out by others that these clergymen do not need additional permission to speak or officiate in Episcopal churches.

The "High Church" element holds that the Episcopal pulpit is properly safeguarded by the new canon, in that it expressly states that the addresses of other than Episcopal clergymen are to be made in the churches only on special occasions, and that even for such occasions the speakers must be approved by the bishop of the diocese or missionary district in which the church is situated. There is no permission given to the Episcopal rectors to "exchange pulpits" with ministers of other denominations. The ecclesiastical authority must in all cases be evoked. It is assumed by those representing this element in the church that the bishops will be careful as to those they permit to speak in the churches.

The "Low Church" element, or at least some part of it, favors the open pulpit and deprecates the fact that the new canon is quite so stringent. It holds that the ministers of other communions may properly resent the fact that their ordination is in nowise recognized by the Episcopal Church, and that they are classed by the new canon among laymen. It is on this point that there is disagreement among those favoring a more open pulpit than has heretofore been the Episcopal rule. For many hold that there was no occasion specifically to mention ministers of other churches in the new canon, and that as a matter of fact it could not be more broadly drawn than it is. "Christian men who are not ministers of this church" should be, they hold, inclusive enough for anybody. It is not believed that Presbyterian or Congregational or Methodist ministers who may on occasions be invited to speak in Episcopal churches will decline because their orders are not specifically recognized by the Episcopal General Convention.

As a matter of fact, many Episcopal rectors are working out the matter for themselves. They are already inviting ministers of other churches to speak from their pulpits, after securing permission from the bishop. Some of the denominational clergymen are accepting the invitations. Some "High Church" leaders say openly that the bishops cannot be trusted properly to discriminate between safe and heretical preachers, but to this statement rectors are made that there are men in the Episcopal orders whose teachings cannot be held to be anywhere near orthodox.

EVANGELICAL REQUIREMENT

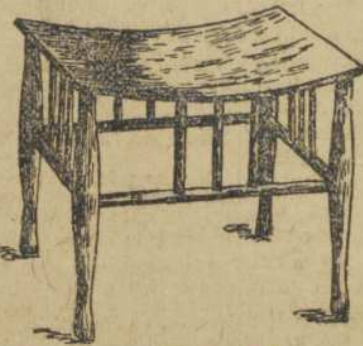

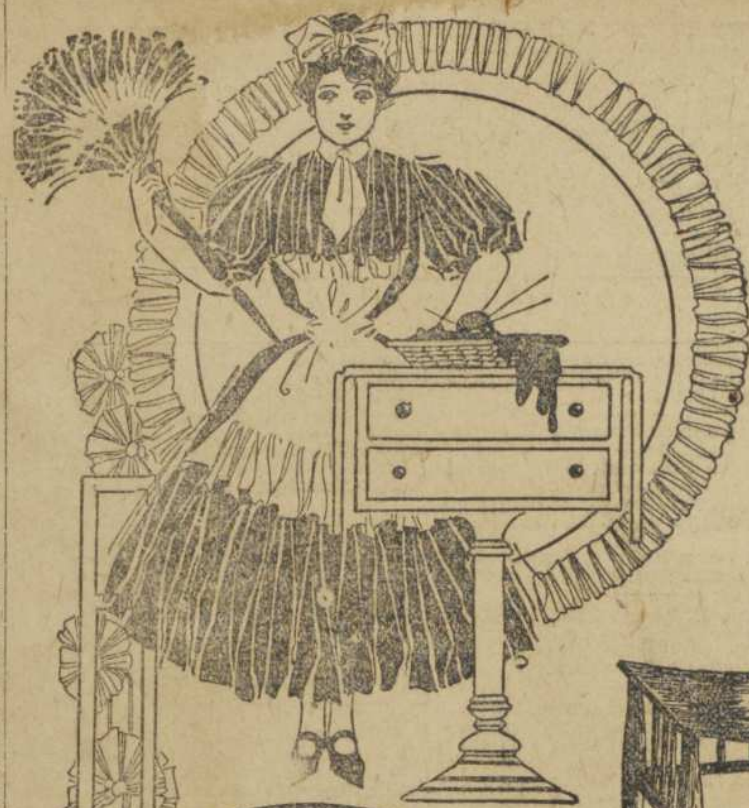

Obtains Still In Y. M. C. A. M membership Regulations.

Unauthorized reports from the International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Associations have given the impression that the associations have let down the religious bars which for forty years have kept from active membership in the association men who are not members of evangelical churches. As a matter of fact there has been no change in the membership requirements nor are any in contemplation.

During the convention just held in Washington the evangelist basis of active membership was considered by a committee of which the Rev. Dr. Edward I. Bosworth, of Oberlin Seminary, was chairman. On the recommendation of this committee the convention reaffirmed the basis for active membership, first adopted by the associations in 1868. There was expressed a desire for a restatement of the basis in modern, understandable language, and on the vote of the convention a committee of five was directed to select a commission of fifteen members of evangelical churches for the purpose of considering the advisability of rephrasing the definition of the basis and reporting a substitute or an alternate to the next International Convention. It was expressly stated in the committee's instructions, however, that the new statement should not be offered, should not weaken the existing basis.

In one particular the religious bars seem to be slightly lowered, in the opinion of Y. M. C. A. leaders, but most of them claim that the lowering is apparent rather than actual. It relates specifically to college associations. Active membership in such associations was made possible to men who were not members of churches, provided they profess the Christian belief, but would make them eligible for membership in evangelical churches. The reason for this permission, which was advocated by Mr. John R. Mott, Bishop McDowell and others, and approved in some of its aspects by Mr. William Jennings Bryan, was that many college students are led into "Christian living" through association influences. Their residence in the college town is but a temporary one and they do not want to become members of churches until they return to their permanent homes. Such men are to be admitted to active membership in the college associations, but they are not to hold office nor are they to be eligible as delegates to International Conventions.

the Faith, which is the great Catholic Missionary Association, having its headquarters in Europe, has just made public the total amounts of its receipts and appropriations for the past year.

The total receipts were $1,350,791, of which the Diocese of Europe contributed $1,010,582. The Diocese of America gave $280,890 of the total amount, while comparatively small sums were received from Asia, Africa and Oceania.

The largest appropriations were those made to missions in Asia, which received $610,547. Africa came next with $265,066, and was followed in order by Oceania with $120,714. Europe with $125,563 and America with $55,553. Expenses of administration were $22,142, and the cost of the society's publications $68,825.

Large proportions of the money spent by the society in America goes for the maintenance of missions in Canada, in the Western and Southwestern parts of the United States, in Mexico and in Alaska. The sums spent in Europe are largely for the support of work in Turkey, although comparatively large sums are spent also in Northern Europe, especially in Northern Germany, Denmark, Sweden and Norway.

Methodist Missions Appointments.

The Rev. Dr. Robert Forbes has been elected corresponding secretary of the Methodist Board of Home Missions and Church Extension, to succeed the late Rev. Dr. James M. King, who has been for many years the principal church extension officer of the Methodist Church. Dr. Forbes was formerly assistant to Dr. King. The board has made another promotion, moving up the Rev. Dr. Ward Platt from the field secretaryship to the assistant corresponding secretaryship.

This Methodist board, which has great responsibilities for work in the United States, was organized but a short time ago, at the time of the division of the work of the Methodist Missionary Society into home and foreign boards. Its annual meeting has just been held in Portland, Ore., where the decision was made to appropriate $500,000 for missionary purposes for the coming year in the home field, besides a large sum for special work in cities. The receipts of the board last year were almost $1,500,000, from which large expenditures were as follows: Donations to churches, $117,882; home missions, $578,267; foreign missions, $134,221; California rehabilitation, $61,243; salaries and office expenses, about $50,000; publications, about $85,000. The headquarters of the Methodist Home Board are in Philadelphia, and there is a proposition to erect on property owned by the board there a suitable headquarters building.

Congregational Policy.

Evidence of an acceptance by the churches of the changes in Congregational polity suggested by the recent National Council are already being heard from. For years it has been the practice of Congregational churches practically to obtain their own pastors, although it had become the custom for each church to call its neighboring churches into a voluntary council before, which the candidate for the pastorate appeared, and by which he was sometimes examined. The National Council, which has no powers of legislation, suggested that the State organization of Congregational churches should be known as conferences and the district bodies as associations. It was further suggested that candidates for the ministry or for pastorates should be approved by the conferences. This usage is now being followed and already two ministers have been ordained without the calling of the old style councils. An advantage of the new plan is said to be that the conference passes upon the candidate before the date set for his ordination, so that if there should be any hitch in the proceedings there will not embarrass the candidate to the embarrassment to the candidate that was the rule when the meeting of a council to examine a candidate and his ordination were arranged to occur at the one time and place.

Presbyterian Men To Meet.

A convention of men in the Presbyterian Church is announced to be held in Philadelphia, February 11 to 13 of next year. The convention is called by authority of the Board of Foreign Missions to consider the foreign work of the denomination, and arrangements for the gathering are being made by David McNaughey, one of the associate secretaries of the board. A feature of the convention will be reports to be made by members of the foreign departments of the Laymen's Missionary Movement, who during the past year have visited and investigated Presbyterian missions on the foreign fields.

Dutch Supper.

The Good Will Circle of St. John's Evangelical church will give a Dutch supper Wednesday, December 11, at the parish hall, Clay and Market streets, for the benefit of the Louisville Protestant Athenaeum. A most cordial invitation is extended to all.

POWERFUL ARC LIGHT.

[New York Times.]

Tests have been made in Newark, N. J., of a new electric lamp, the invention of Ralph Scott, a young resident of that city. The lamp is designed to light large spaces, the smallest size being 4,000 candle power and the largest 200,000. A special size is being made by Mr. Scott, who is only twenty-two years old, for the Lackawanna terminal in Hoboken. The inventor says this light will give 1,500,000 candle power. The first test of a 32,000 candle power lamp was made on Monday night at the inventor's factory in Newark. The lamp threw such a brilliant light that the reflection was visible for miles. The largest electric lamp in the world will be built this winter by Mr. Scott for a theater in Times Square. The principle of the new lamp is the gathering of a cluster of rays in such a manner that they shut down, ward off from each other, thus eliminating the shadow.

A DELIGHTFUL ENTERTAINMENT

Given Yesterday Afternoon By Mrs. George H. Wilson At Her Home For the Members of the John Marshall Chapter, D. A. R.

THE members of the John Marshall Chapter, D. A. R., were entertained delightfully yesterday afternoon by the Regent, Mrs. George H. Wilson, at her home in St. James Court.

After the business meeting, from 2 until 4 o'clock, was over an interesting programme was given.

The United States Daughters of 1812 were the guests of the chapter.

At the conclusion of the business meeting the ladies stood to salute the flag, and Mrs. Wilson gracefully recited the following lines:

"Your flag and my flag! Oh, how much it holds!
Four land and my land, secure within its folds,
Your heart and my heart beat quicker at the sight,
Sun-kissed and wind-tossed, red and blue and white.

The only flag, the great flag,
The flag for me and you,
Glorified, all else beside,
The red and white and blue."

The salute to the flag was followed by musical variations of the Star-Spangled Banner, played by Miss Jule McIver, of Texas. Columbia was sung by Mrs. Thomas Hunter.

The Regent, Mrs. Wilson, read a paper on the battle of Trenton. Mrs. Wilson selected this subject as two of her ancestors played a prominent part in the battle. They were Col. John Hunt and Capt. John Quicksall.

The paper was followed by a song, "My Jersey Land," sung by Miss Wilkerson. Miss Mary Lawrence Claxton recited "The Battle of Bunker Hill," and the programme was closed by the members of the chapter singing "America," Miss McIver playing the accompaniment.

Mr. Wilson, who is the president of the Sons of the American Revolution, made the greeting speech to the members upon their arrival.

The house was beautifully and appropriately decorated in American flags. The refreshment table in the dining-room had a cover of satin damask, and in the center was a large crystal vase of Golden Gate roses standing on a mirror bordered with smilax. Around the roses were flags. Bows of blue and white, the colors of the D. A. R., were tied at two ends of the table and crossed flags were placed at the other ends.

The flowers used in the ornamentation of the drawing-room and library were Killarney roses. One interesting bit of decoration was an old engraving of Washington at the battle of Trenton, the picture having been in Mrs. Wilson's family for many years. Flags tied with red, white and blue ribbon were placed above the picture and a vase of flowers stood by it. The original of the picture hangs in one of the galleries at Yale.

The members of the John Marshall Chapter were presented with sixteen handsome volumes, the gift of the children of the late Mrs. Sallie M. Ewing Pope, the founder of the chapter. These volumes consisted of the American Monthly, the organ of the D. A. R., beautifully bound; the yearly report of the D. A. R., known as the Smithsonian Report, containing the history of the society and beautifully illustrated, and a water-color sketch of the insignia of the society, which was presented to Mrs. Pope when she was State Regent.

A new member, Mrs. S. B. Tinsley, was received into the chapter.

Mrs. W. Godfrey Hunter was elected recording secretary in place of Miss Catherine Fisher Marshall, who has gone to Chicago to spend the winter to find such splendid college material in the bright young men and women who have matriculated this autumn.

SCHOOL LIBRARIES

Will Be Founded By Women's Clubs, Working Along Unique and Practical Lines.

MRS. MORRIS BARTLETT, of Lawrenceburg, chairman of the Library Extension Committee of the Kentucky Federation of Women's Clubs, is sending a personal letter to every club in the State urging the members to be- come interested in the establishment of a circulating library for the district schools of its county.

Her plan is that each county be taken as a unit and the clubs of that county do for it what the Federation has done for the mountains through its traveling library. Where books can not be obtained magazines will be most acceptable.

A club, by consulting and co-operating with the county superintendent and the other clubs of its county, can arrange a circuit by which the boxes of books and magazines can go from one school to another throughout the county. After staying six or eight weeks

She will also sing the "Adriano," recitative and Air from "Rienzi," also by Wagner. Two other great operatic numbers will appear on her programme that evening—an Air from the old Italian opera, "Mitrate," by Rossini, who was famous as a composer in the Seventeenth century, and the fourth of the most exciting numbers that can be placed upon a programme, and in them Schumann-Heink gives to her hearers opportunities of judging the many sides of her great art. The balance of the programme is made up of songs by Schubert, Liszt, Brahms and a group of six

To Speak At the Woman's Club On Thursday Evening Under the Auspices of the Art Department.

A DISTINGUISHED lecturer has been secured for the Art Department meeting of the Woman's Club on Thursday evening at 8 o'clock.

Since it is in keeping with the State Development Association to promote art, the meeting is free to the public without admission fee and the club hopes to have a large audience of men as well as of women.

The speaker will be introduced by Chancellor J. C. Willis, of the University of Louisville, who is deeply interested in developing a higher scholarship in the State, and who is rejoiced at a school a box can be sent on to the next, the teachers acting as librarians, until the circuit has been completed, the books stopping at the last place as a nucleus for a permanent school library.

If every year a box is started at each school in the county it will not be long until every school has its own library and Kentucky's educational status rank among the highest instead of the lowest.

HIS SKULL FRACTURED

FORMER LOUISVILLE MAN KILLED AT ZANESVILLE, O.

Body Brought Home For Burial—Funeral Services Will Be Held This Afternoon.

The body of T. W. Lemay, formerly a laborer employed at the Mayfield Woolen Mills, who died in Zanesville, O., of a fractured skull, arrived in Louisville yesterday morning and was taken to the home of his cousin, George White, at 829 Letterie avenue. The blow is said by members of his family to have been inflicted by Taylor Duke, a fellow-employee, with a flat iron.

According to the family, Lemay and the youth, who were employed at one of the big mercantile tailoring establishments in Zanesville, are said to have become involved in an altercation over an electric light. During the argument Duke is alleged to have picked up Lemay, striking him in the back of the head. Particles of the bone sank into his brain, and he died without ever regaining consciousness. Duke was arrested, and is now in jail awaiting an examining trial on the charge of murder.

Besides his cousin, Mr. Lemay is survived by three daughters, Mrs. Fred Blake, of 217 St. Joe street, in Clinton; Miss Willie Lemay, also of Louisville, and Miss Beale Lemay, of Zanesville. Lemay was fifty-three years of age and was well known in Louisville. The funeral service will be held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at the residence of Mr. White, 829 Letterie avenue. The burial will be in Eastern cemetery.

ARGUMENTS IN STREET CAR CASES SET FOR TO-MORROW.

Judge McGee Will Allow One Hour For Each Side—Remaining Nine Defendants Rest Their Cases.

The cases against the eleven remaining street-car men charged with conspiracy to riot were rested without evidence by the defense in the Police Court yesterday afternoon, shortly after court had convened, and Judge McGee will hand down his decision concerning them, as well as concerning those cases in which evidence has been produced, some time next week. He announced yesterday afternoon that he would allow one hour for each side to present argument when the court convenes on Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and that he will thereafter take the cases under advisement on the basis of all the evidence submitted. Owing to several novelties in the trial involving disputed points of law, Judge McGee will take careful and thorough deliberation of all phases of the trial, and with this end in view he yesterday announced his intention of calling in the attorneys of both sides to consult with him.

Denham's friends thought it best for him to resign, and he was disappointed, so if the courts should hold that he could not hold over last election and that if Snyder was not legally elected he could have a new commission given him since the election. The case will be taken to the Court of Appeals at once.

Judge Moss refused to appoint an Attorney pro tem for the remainder of the term, so County Attorney I. N. Stealy has charge of all the Commonwealth's business.

KENTUCKY'S FIRST INAUGURATIONS VERY SIMPLE.

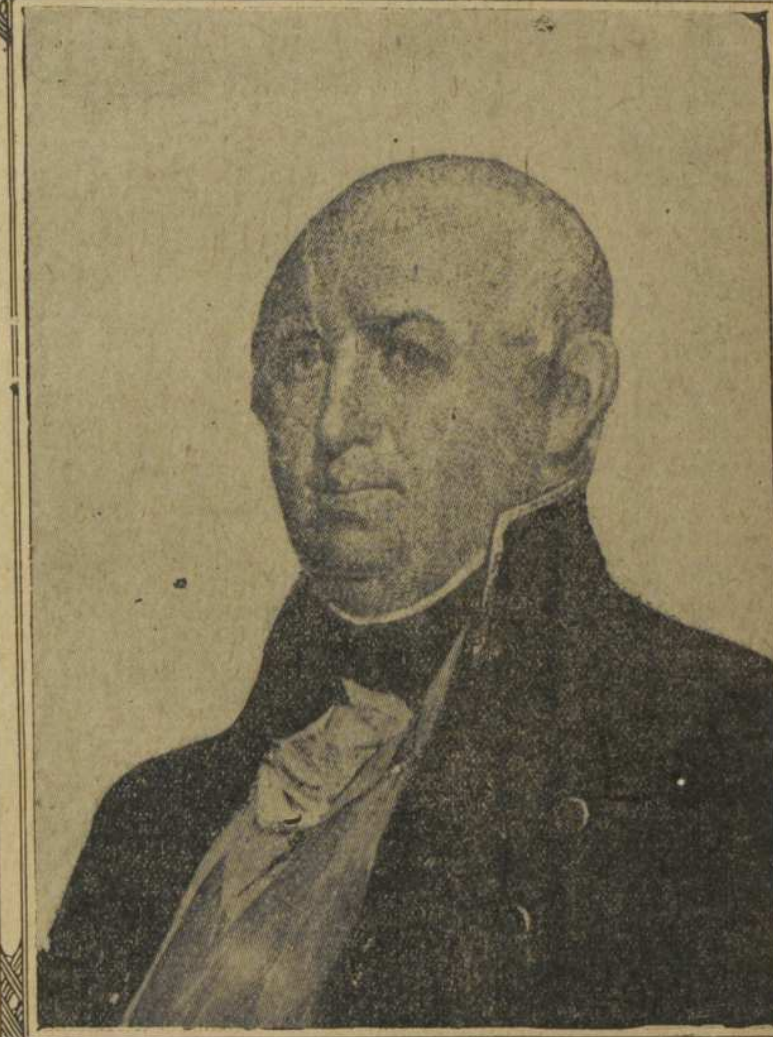

GOV. JAMES GARRARD, FIRST EXECUTIVE INAUGURATED AT FRANKFORT.

MRS. JAMES GARRARD, FIRST MISTRESS OF PRESENT MANSION.

MRS. SUSANNA HART SHELBY.

GOVERNOR ISAAC SHELBY, THE FIRST EXECUTIVE.

AFTER 112 years of statehood the capital of Kentucky is again in the pleasant anticipation of another inauguration.

The committees in charge of the big affair are busily trying to prepare for some five thousand guests for the ball alone. The Coliseum has been chosen for this as the largest space procurable. The Capital Hotel, itself a landmark in Kentucky's history, where for over half a century all the inaugural balls have been held, will be used for the reception of the Governor and his lady, immediately preceding the ball and after the inaugural ceremonies have taken place at the State House.

The ceremonies attending the official installation of our Governors have increased steadily since Isaac Shelby was received in the public square at Lexington over a century ago.

The installation of Governor-elect Wilson will in no wise diminish the pomp and glory. Naturally all this modern elation brings to mind the question of what they did some hundred or so years ago, when the first Governor was installed in office.

It took place on the fourth day of June, 1792, in the town of Lexington, which was appointed to be the first capital of the State. Isaac Shelby rode from Lincoln county to Lexington. At Danville the citizens of the place met him en route and lustily cheered him and offered him their congratulations in an address prepared for the occasion. Lexington sent a military guard to accompany him to the capital. Naturally, the whole State was in a state of joyous and happy anticipation, and representatives from all portions of the "Dark and Bloody Ground" had arrived days before to hail him chief.

There in the open square at the corner of Main street and Broadway, with booming of cannon and hearty cheers, silk-coated gentlemen rubbed shoulders with buckskin, and homespun gowns with silk brocade.

In such a crowd the first Governor alighted from his horse to receive the address of welcome which was presented to him by the chairman of the town Board of Trustees, Mr. John Bradford, known lovingly as "Old Wisdom." After the oath of office was administered he was escorted to his room at the "Sheaf of Wheat" Inn.

The same day the Governor sent his reply to the address of welcome, and at the same time appointed John Brown as Secretary of State and George Nichols as Attorney General.

The Legislature assembled and chose Alexander Scott Bullitt for presiding officer of the Senate and Robert Brockridge Speaker of the House.

On the sixth day, history tells us, "the Governor met the Legislature in person, after the ancient custom of English Kings, which had been followed by the colonial Governors."

"He appeared at the door of the first Statehouse, attended by his Secretary of State. The Speaker of the Senate advanced to meet him to conduct him to his seat. After a moment of solemn silence, he arose, read an address to the two houses, and presented a manuscript copy to each of the Speakers, and then retired in an impressive manner.

"On the 22d of December, 1792, the second session of the Kentucky Legislature adjourned, to hold no more meetings in Lexington. The Commissioners had selected Frankfort as the permanent capital of the State.

"Nestled in the midst of hills, on the banks of the Kentucky river, Frankfort had, certainly, the advantage of a picturesque situation.

"A private dwelling was employed as a temporary Statehouse while a permanent stone building was being erected. This was occupied November 3, 1794. A Governor's mansion was likewise being built."

This mansion, which has housed all the Governors of Kentucky except the first, whose mansion was a log house at the foot of Broadway, near the river, was finished in 1797.

After the war of 1812, when Gov. Shelby was offered the portfolio of War by the President, Mrs. Shelby persuaded him to refuse it, and they spent the rest of their lives at "Traveler's Rest," their home in Lincoln county.

So the first Governor to occupy the "Mansion" was Gov. James Garrard. Down the old road by the present State Arsenal, drawn by four black horses, came Gov. Garrard and Mrs. Garrard from Virginia. The glories of that new home of the Chief Executive had been heralded abroad, and the natives flocked by the hundreds to view the wonderful furniture it contained.

These sight-seeing visitors unhesitatingly hitched their horses in front of the mansion and "spent a day or two"

with the mistress.

The first spinet was owned by the Garrards, and was built for their daughter by the father of Dr. John Goodman, of Louisville.

They also owned the first carpet, the envy and pride of the whole countryside.

This quaint old "Mansion" is now in an undesirable residential quarter of the city. Its proximity to the prison—which was built afterward—is the butt of many a good-natured joke on the part of visitors to the Capitol.

It is a singular and indisputable fact that both Gov. Letcher and Gov. Metcalf worked upon the foundation, the first as bricklayer and the latter as stonemason. Both, it seems, bulid better than they wot of.

The old edifice is comfortable and homelike, but very unsafe for a large crowd. The new State Capitol and the new station and other improvements in the capital of the State demand a fitting residence for our future Governors.

As it would seem almost a sacrilege to tear down the old historic pile of bricks it is hoped that provision will be made to keep it intact. For all that the house has sheltered over thirty Governors, only one child has been born under its roof, little Eleanor Raphael Beckham, the lovely eldest child of Governor and Mrs. Beckham. Some claim that the child's grandmother, Mrs. Julia Wickliffe Beckham, was born there during the incumbency of her father, Gov. Wickliffe, but it is ascertained that she came there as a tiny child and was not born in the mansion.

ELLA HUTCHISON ELLWANGER.

Story of Purchase of Louisville's First Fire Equipment.

IN AN old book with yellow leaves and faded ink, which has outlived its days of usefulness and is fast becoming a valuable relic, is contained a closed chapter of the mercantile life of Louisville, dating from a period before the Civil War until the early '70s. The book is in the possession of the Louisville Board of Fire Underwriters at its office in the Kenyon building, and contains the minutes of meetings from the organization of the board, February 15, 1854, until after 1870. A transcript has been prepared of the interesting facts contained in the book, so that the present members of the board may familiarize themselves with the past history of their organization without laboriously delving through the minutes themselves.

In connection with the old book it is a matter of interest to the general public and a source of pride to the members of the Board of Fire Underwriters to know that the organization is the oldest of its kind in point of continuity in the United States. Other boards of fire underwriters were organized before the one in Louisville, but all of them at one time or another suspended for different periods of years, and the bodies formed later had no connection with the ones which had become defunct.

A Precarious Period.

While the Louisville board has never suspended since its beginning, more than fifty-four years ago, it came perilously near going out of existence during the troublous times previous to and during the Civil War. The disordered leaves of the secretary's book for those four years are almost barren of reports of meetings. The meetings of the period are summed up in these few words in the new transcript:

"May 5, 1862, to March 16, 1864—There is scarcely any business. At the meetings of the board never more than three or four members are in attendance."

Perhaps no better record of the early struggles for an efficient fire department is written anywhere than in the old book. With the modern apparatus, embodied in rubber-tired engines, reels and hook and ladders, the electric fire alarm system, the many miles of light and durable hose, the water tower, carbon lamps, chemical wagons, stand pipes and a host of other improved and up-to-date equipment, it is hard to realize the humble beginnings of the department of to-day.

The fight and incentive for improvement came from the Louisville Board of Fire Underwriters. In many instances it was that body's money which bought new inventions and additions for the Fire Department. The minutes of the book record the arrival of the first fire engine in Louisville, the establishment of the office of Fire Marshal, the beginning of the paid Fire Department.

Interest In Early Engine.

The interest created by the exhibition and arrival of the first fire engine in Louisville is almost laughable to-day, but in those days the trial test was as terrifying and impressive as they were to the Irishman in New York, who said that "H— just went up the street in two loads."

The first fire engine which was practical for fighting fires arrived in Louisville in April, 1857. It was given a trial in this city by its manufacturer, whose name is given as Mr. Latta, of Cincinnati. An imaginary fire was fought at midday at Third and Main streets. The trial was evidently successful, as there appear in the minutes of the next meeting the words, "Board decides to raise $5,000 to purchase Mr. Latta's engine." There is also recorded in the minutes of an earlier date, March 17, 1857, that "Mr. Danforth and Mr. Tyler were appointed a committee to correspond with manufacturers at Cincinnati and learn if their steam fire engine is practical, what would be the cost of a first-rate engine, and the charge for bringing it to Louisville."

First Fire Engine.

This engine was not the first one that was made a part of the Louisville Fire Department, according to the minutes of the board. The following appears in the minutes under the date line August 24, 1854: "First fire steam engine in Louisville. Built by John Lawson, of Louisville. A hook and ladder wagon has also been bought for the fire department. All the firemen in the department from now on will be paid and kept on duty night and day. Six sections of hose have been purchased for the department, 1,000 feet in length."

Leather Hose Too Heavy For Early Fire-fighters

The first engine referred to in the minutes proved to be impractical. It was soon discarded for the engine which arrived in Louisville from Cincinnati in 1857.

Mr. Lawson's engine was so ponderous that it took six horses to haul it to a fire, and the working of its pumps could be heard for miles away. It burned coal with the rapidity of a gigantic furnace, taking two firemen to feed it. At small fires the cost of coal consumed by the engine was more than the total damage of the flames.

The hose referred to as being purchased was made of leather, riveted together, and made watertight by a liberal application of grease both inside and out. The band of brass rivets ran about the hose in a serpentine manner, giving it the appearance of a striped snake. But rubber hose had been invented by this year and the Board of Fire Underwriters was anxious for its adoption, as the leather hose was almost too heavy for men to handle. In the minutes of the meeting, November 23, 1857, is the statement, "Committee appointed to interview Mayor Pilcher in reference to the use of India rubber hose by the fire department." In those days all rubber was referred to as "India rubber."

A Horse Mystery.

A strange record in the minutes appeared soon after the purchase of the Cincinnati fire engine. It is for the meeting of June 15, 1857, and reads thus: "The board will purchase three horses for their new fire engine. If they cannot be secured in this city the committee is authorized to telegraph to Mr. Latta at Cincinnati to purchase them in that city." It is hard to understand the meaning of this last extract from the old book, as Louisville was one of the largest horse markets in the country in those days. Why it should have been thought that the three horses could not be purchased in this city is not known and can only be explained by the supposition that the members of the board were looking for "experienced horses."

All these improvements seem not to have been without beneficial results, for the following motion was recorded at the meeting of April 27, 1859: "In view of the present efficiency of the fire department it is considered expedient to reduce the rates of fire insurance."

Early Fire Chief.

For the meeting held June 19, 1857, the following is part of the record: "Dr. John R. Pirtle, appointed 'director' of the new fire engine." Dr. Pirtle would be called a captain to-day. From this extract it would seem that the engine was not given to the city, but that it made all runs in the interest of the board. There is also a statement in the old book near the beginning of the organization which relates the placing of a gong in the secretary's home "so that he may be apprised of fires."

The first page of the old book contains an account of the first meeting. It was held February 15, 1854, in the Merchants' Exchange building, either on Sixth street or Fifth street. The first officers elected were: President, William Riddle; vice president, G. W. Merriweather; and secretary and treasurer, B. H. Gwathmey, Thomas S. Kennedy was a charter member and was the last one to survive. Mr. Kennedy died in 1892 at his home in Crescent Hill. The first member of the board to die was N. C. Summers, whose death occurred April 22, 1858.

The minutes show the election of Thomas C. Timberlake to membership April 8, 1868. Mr. Timberlake is still a member of the board and, although he has been one for almost forty years, is still a comparatively young man, as he was extremely youthful when he was admitted to membership. The book of the secretary shows that on November 16, 1864, the office of Fire Marshal was established. J. W. G. Simrall was the first Fire Marshal the minutes record.

First Salvage Corps.

During the month of April, 1868, the board established a salvage corps and the minutes record the purchase of some tarpaulins and waterproof covers. In spite of its fifty-four years of existence the board has had but few presidents. After William Riddle Col. P. B. Atwood was elected. He took office in 1856. Joseph Danforth was elected to the place of honor in 1881 upon the resignation of Col. Atwood, who went to war.

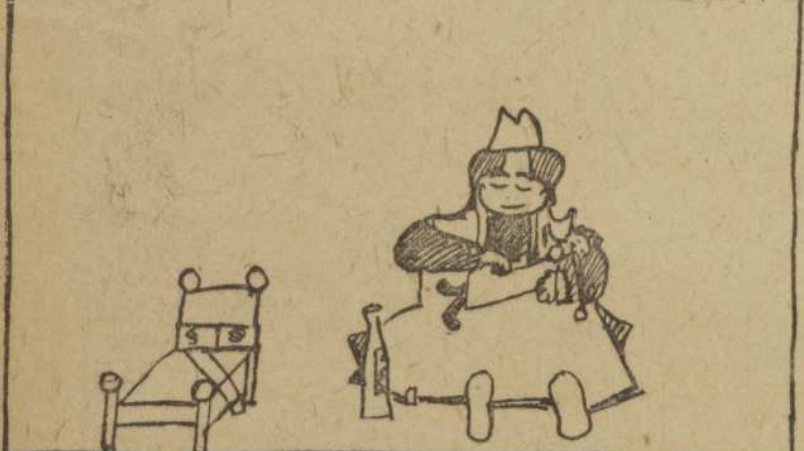

At the close of the war Col. Atwood was re-elected and held office until his death in 1867. Mr. Danforth was then again elected president and held office for twenty years until 1887. Mr. Danforth died in office, as did Col. Atwood. Mr. A. Huston was the next president and served ten years. In 1897 George L. Danforth, a son of the early president, was elected and held office until 1899. Alfred Pirtle was president for 1899-1900. Donald Macpherson was then elected and still fills the chair.

Competition Sharp.

In many places in the old book is plainly shown the fight for business during the year of the panic in 1873. At every meeting three or four members of the board were fined for cutting rates below the fixed tariff. Some of the fines were large and but few of them were remitted.

A BRAVE DOG.

One night about 11 o'clock we were awakened out of our sleep by the going of the fire alarm. We all got out of bed and ran to the window and there we saw the flames about a square from us.

We dressed hurriedly and ran to the fire. When we arrived there everybody said the family had escaped. There were nine children, so the parents had a hard time getting them out. The mother thought the father had the baby, a little girl of about six months, and the father thought the mother had the child.

When he went to her and found she did not have the baby they were all most wild. He ran into the house and up the burning flight of stairs. He could hear people calling him to come down. When he got to the room he found the bed was empty. He was horrified. "How could the baby have gotten out?" he thought.

He looked under the bed and everywhere in less time than it takes me to tell.

Then one of the firemen came and dragged him out. The roof fell as they reached the door. When the father got down there he found the baby safe in its mother's arms.

The family owned a large dog named Rover, which usually slept in the barn, when he saw the flames he barked furiously and when the door was opened he rushed in unnoted by the family in their excitement and ran upstairs and grabbed the baby by the thickest part of its clothing and carried it downstairs and out into the alley, where the distracted mother was waiting for her husband's return.

When she saw the dog with the baby she thought it was dead. But it did not have a scratch or bruise on it. The dog stayed by the baby the rest of the night, as if he were afraid something would happen to it again. The next morning they gave Rover a good breakfast and he was the hero of the day. ELIZABETH SPALDING.

"Dear me," said a little girl, as she sat down on an old broken chair in the garret. "I have been working hard, and it seems that it has no end."

It was a poor little girl who said this. Her mother and father were dead and her uncle was the only relative she had. Because she was prettier than his daughter, he would not let her. He put her up in the garret to sleep and made her eat the things that were thrown away. Her name was Elizabeth Spalding. She was good, in spite of her poverty. All the clothes she had were on her back. Once an old lady came to the door, and she opened it and let the old woman in. She asked her if she could stay that night, and she said she could. The old woman said she was going on a long journey, and would bring her something on her return. So Elizabeth gave her half of her food and some of her bedclothes to sleep under.

It was near Christmas time, and she had had a Christmas tree every year, but her mother was dead and her uncle would not give her any money to get one. She had a statue of St. Anthony, and every Christmas she would take her bedspread and get some blocks and build an altar and put St. Anthony on it. That night she prayed to St. Anthony that she might have a tree. Some one from Brown county, Ohio, who had known her mother and father heard that she was poor and how good she was, and sent her a tree and lots of things. Her uncle was surprised when he saw the box addressed to her, and took it up himself to her. The old woman gave her a hat and some other things. She was very happy. When she saw these things there was but one thing that she wished, and that was that her uncle would be a true, good man, and after that his heart was changed. DORRITT OGLESBY, 2012 Preston street.

MOTHER.

"M" stands for mother, just the sweetest word. Little folks or big folks ever yet have heard. "O" stands for often, little folks should say. How much they love mother and want to obey. "T" stands for two kisses every day we should give to mother, as we start to school in the "M" way. "H" stands for honor; that is what is due to the darling mother who does so much for you. "G" stands for every little girl and boy who obeys her to mother a helper and a joy. "R" stands for ruby, and many another gem. But we wouldn't give our mother for any one of them. A CHRISTMAS STORY.

Dorothy was sitting by the fire waiting for Santa Claus to come down the chimney. Both Auntie and Mamma had told her that Santa would not leave her anything if he found that she was awake. But she only said: "You know you said I could last year."

Then her mother said: "Well, if you have set your heart on it I guess you will have to do it. I suppose her mother must have told her that I would not leave her anything, but she thought she knew best. Well, she will find out. Then Santa Claus went up the chimney. Then Dorothy saw how foolish she sail and foresail booms for schooners. They also cut trees for the yards of such vessels as were bark or brig-rigged.

MOONSHINE ISLAND

Or The Luck of a Boom Hunter.

CHAPTER I

When a tree of the right size was found it was cut down and dragged to the shore of the bay, no matter what the distance, and was then towed up to one of the shipyards behind a sailboat and sold. If you are not quite clear as to what a boom is I may tell you that it is a long pole to which the lower part of one of the big sails is attached. Its weight keeps the canvas stretched. There is a shorter boom at the top of the sail for the same purpose. These booms must be of particular size, free of rot and knots and of the best quality of pine. It is the same with the yards and bowsprit.

The boom-hunters, as they came to be known all along the lakes, did not get rich out of their work. They worked in pairs, and even when they had the luck to find a choice stick and had spent a day in getting it to the water, they must tow it for twenty miles, perhaps. Sometimes they were overtaken by a storm and had to cut loose from it. Sometimes the boom was all their trouble, the stick was cut to the shipyard, it was overhauled and found defective. None of them made more than a living, and it was a poor living at that for some of them.

Ten miles from the mouth of the Saginaw river there dwelt a settler named Henry Dyke. In the West or the South they would have called him a squatter. He built a cabin on land belonging to the State, and the extent of his farming was to raise a few vegetables. His main employment consisted in the winter season, was boom hunting. In the winter he shot and trapped and fished through the ice. Albert Dyke, his son and only child, was always called Burt for short, could just remember back to when his mother died. Then he went away and lived with an uncle until he was twelve, at which time his father sent for him. He had been home a year and was thirteen years old when our story opens.

Not much good can be said of the father. He was only inclined to be lazy, but it was an act of selfishness to bring the lad back to the woods and put him at man's work when he had a home in Detroit and was one of the brightest scholars in his classes in school. He was now to become a boom-hunter with his father. There was not a neighbor within two miles of him, and there was not a boy of his age nearer than Bay City. It was to be a complete change in life, and I must give him the credit for making no complaint. His clothes were to be rough and ragged, his work hard and dangerous, and his wages were to be nothing but home; but two days after his arrival he was in the woods with his father. The course of the next two months he was not only broken into the work of selecting the proper trees and skidding them down to the lake shore, but of managing the old sailboat that towed them up to the shipyard.

He had found his father much changed. Mr. Dyke was never much of a talker, but now there were days

"Because she is a naughty child," said Santa, severely, "and her fault is a very bad one. The Moon says that she is greedy."

"I don't believe it," Mrs. Santa asserted. "The Moon is a foolish fellow." "Well, he looks into her room every evening," Santa said, sadly, "and he says that she always hides a piece of cake behind the books on her little shelf and when her aunt comes she looks out of the window as if nothing had happened. Now, what do you think of that?"

"I think there is some mistake," said Mrs. Santa, and I tell you one thing right now, if that blue doll doesn't go to Patience Patterson, not another child shall have it."

"Very well," said Santa, patiently, "but I really cannot give it to a greedy child."

So the days went on, and in a big, lonely house in a big, noisy city, little Patience Patterson waited for Christmas.

"Do you think I might have a doll this year, Aunt Prudence?" she asked timidly one evening.

"The Moon is a foolish fellow," was the crushing answer, and little Patience murmured to the winter wind.

TOO MUCH FISHING.

If the American boy can go fishing three or four times a year he thinks he is having a good time of it, but an American missionary in China says that Chinese boys whose parents live near the water begin fishing when four years old and put in at least 200 days a year at it. They have to do it for a living. When the fish don't bite the boy is apt to come in for a licking.

MRS. SANTA held up the big blue doll for Santa Claus to look at.

"I dressed it myself," she said, "and it's a beauty. I am going to wrap it in white tissue paper and lay it on the shelf, and you must watch carefully for some good little girl to give it to."

"I shan't have to look far," Santa said; "it shall go to Patience Patterson's Christmas."

New Shakespeare Theory May Be Tested By Razing of Old Building

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Shakespeare's bones do not lie in the famous tomb at Stratford-on-Avon which has been gazed upon with veneration by so many thousands of American travelers. Despite his celebrated injunction to the contrary, the actor's remains were taken from their burial place many years ago and thrown into a charnel house at Stratford. Moreover, if a search is made at Crosby Hall, the ancient building in London for whose preservation a fund was started recently, the original manuscripts of Richard III. and others of the plays credited to the bard will be found, since they were hidden there, and not destroyed in the Globe Theater fire, as the world supposes. There is reason, too, for believing that Ignatius Donnelly, the American who asserted that Bacon wrote the works of "Shakespeare," may afterward have formed a different and correct solution of the historic mystery, but never have made it public.

The foregoing remarkable statements, together with others scarcely less striking, were made to me by J. C. Nicol, author of the latest theory regarding "Shakespeare's" identity, in the course of an interview which I had with him the other day at his home in London. Mr. Nicol is the Englishman who, as announced recently, claims to have discovered a new Shakespearean cypher which, when unravelled, reveals the third Earl of Southampton as the author of the immortal works. Americans who read of his reputed discovery doubtless put him down either as a crank or a seeker for cheap notoriety, and when they saw it stated further along in the same dispatches that this latest aspirant to the role of Ignatius Donnelly asserted that he knew the exact hiding places of the long-lost Shakespearean manuscripts, the opinion that he was a crack-brained dreamer must have been considerably strengthened.

Scholar of Distinction.

But Mr. Nicol proves to be not the sort of man whose statements, however weird and incredible they may appear, can be lightly dismissed. He is a scholar of much distinction. Though only in his forty-first year, he holds exceptional certificates from various English school authorities. He is a master in education and for several years has conducted a training school for teachers. He has gained first-class scholarships in science, special languages and advanced teaching. In art he has won the Bourke prize at the South Kensington schools, and he holds testimonials from the heads of such seats of learning as the Lancashire and Cheshire Institute, Manchester; the Waterloo Organized Science School and the Central Institution, South Kensington.

It would seem that his training has especially equipped him for the task he has undertaken of unraveling the mystery of the Shakespeare authorship, for most of his life has been spent in acquiring all sorts of abstruse information. For some years he lectured on English literature and poetry, and it was while giving these discourses that what he calls "the great revelation" came to him. This was over two and a half years ago, and ever since that time Nicol has worked unremittingly in the hope of convincing the world that Henry Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton, wrote the works credited to Shakespeare.

The author of the new cryptic theory was found in a cosy flat at 22 Furness road, Harlesden, North London. His literary sanctum was filled with books, most prominent among which—set up on an easel—was a copy of the first folio edition of what the world supposes to have been Shakespeare's plays. Here is Nicol's own story, exactly as he related it to me:

"All my life I have been a close student of Shakespeare, and from my earliest days I was brought up to ponder over the writings of the great poet. I told. However, of this I cannot say. But I do know that the Shakespeare plays were not written by either Shakespeare or Bacon. I have positive proof of this.

"Moreover, I know positively where the original manuscripts—supposed to have been burned in the fire at the Globe Theater—have been hidden. I have learned these facts by unraveling the cryptograms in the folio edition.

"I shall be quite willing—if any government or wealthy individual—will finance me, to bring these priceless manuscripts to light; but if no one is ready to come forward and do this I see no reason why I should gratuitously reveal myself in a very cleverly concealed signature at the base of the engraving. It is signed 'Martin Droeshout, Sculptor, London.'

The substitution of V for U in this last arrangement of letters calls for no other explanation than the well-known fact that in the old days V stood for both V and U. Another reading of the Martin Droeshout line gives: Earl, Southampton—Civ't's—London—Dro

—This.

"In order to understand why the Earl of Southampton took such elaborate precaution to conceal his identity it must be mentioned that in his day the Earl stood in great danger of losing his head. He had become mixed up in the Essex rebellion and spent two years in the Tower of London. Certain portions of his works, signed 'T. T.', do not mean 'Thomas Thorpe', as commentators have supposed, but 'Tower Taught'. In those days it was forbidden to teach the masses, and the King did all in his power to discover the authorship of the plays. It was generally known that the actor Shakespeare was not the one who wrote the plays, and hence the King didn't trouble about him. The Earl of Southampton was the leading wit and scholar of the day. Besides this, as his property was obtained mainly from the breaking up of the great monasteries, he came into possession of immense libraries, and had a command of more knowledge than anyone else of his time.

"There is ample evidence of the wonderful intellect of the young Earl of Southampton. He composed a remarkable essay at the age of eight, and at sixteen had earned the degree of M. A.

It is not generally known that the so-called Shakespeare grave was opened some years ago. Though the inscription on the tomb says:

"Cursed be he that moves these bones," the bones were moved. Many years ago when actors were in ill-repute in Stratford, the grave of Shakespeare was opened and his bones thrown into the charnelhouse. This is not known to the general public, but there is ample testimony for it, none the less.

"When I began investigating these matters, it did not take long to convince me that the man of Stratford had nothing to do with the plays. I also demonstrated to my own satisfaction that Bacon did not write the plays and sonnets, though I have evidence to prove that Bacon did assist the Earl of Southampton in the preparation of some of his cyphers.

"It is thus with many of the other passages. For instance, in the Folio, we have the words: 'Upon the Lines and Life of the Famous Scenic Poet, Master William Shakespeare,' which words contain the Richard Burbage cypher of Crosby Hall, London. It must be borne in mind that Henry Wriothesley, Earl of Southampton, was a member of the Antinomian Order, and lived at Crosby Hall, where he sequestered some of his manuscripts.

"The Earl of Southampton was also a painter of much skill, and he mentions in his cypher that in fourteen of his paintings of himself the letter 'H' will be found if the pigment be removed from the eye. One of these paintings has recently been discovered near Darlington, and I could point to the hiding place of several others.

"In the play, 'Hamlet,' Southampton wrote his own life. The town of Southampton was built on what was then known as the River Hamble, and in the first production of the play it was called 'Hamblet.'

"While Southampton was one of the greatest scholars and travelers of his day, the Stratford Shakespeare was neither. Shakespeare died years before the plays were published, while Southampton died in the year following the production of the great Folio. His immense labors were complete, and he died at Bergen-op-Zoom, in Holland, from brain exhaustion or lethargy.

"Various scholars have recently attacked the idea that the plays of Stratford wrote these plays. For example, a German savant, Herr Bleibtreu, attributed the plays to the Duke of Rutland. So far as they go, these theories are in the right direction. But Rutland was a friend of Southampton, and the latter used any name that occurred in order to conceal his identity. Most persons who have investigated these matters have not proceeded far enough in their studies. Personally I have an admiration for the German students of 'Shakespeare.' In fact, they seem to know him better than our English men of letters and have made a closer study of his life.

"As to the exact spots where the originals of the plays are concealed, I have stood within a few yards of their present burial place. I will say this much: They are buried in lead near the seashore, and on one of the estates belonging to that time to the Southampton family. In the cypher telling me the exact location of the treasure I have read that the Twelfth Proposition in Euclid is to be used in making this discovery, and the buried spot is to be located from a certain church steeple 'in those loved estates.' The cypher reads, in part: 'No one knows of this except my host Allen—one place enough 9th May—Do not attempt to remove. If not known you can keep them safe.'

"The original manuscript of Romeo and Juliet was for a time buried in a certain tomb of Dulwich cemetery. The King had the gates of this tomb renewed, and for a time Southampton trembled that the discovery would be made, but it was not.

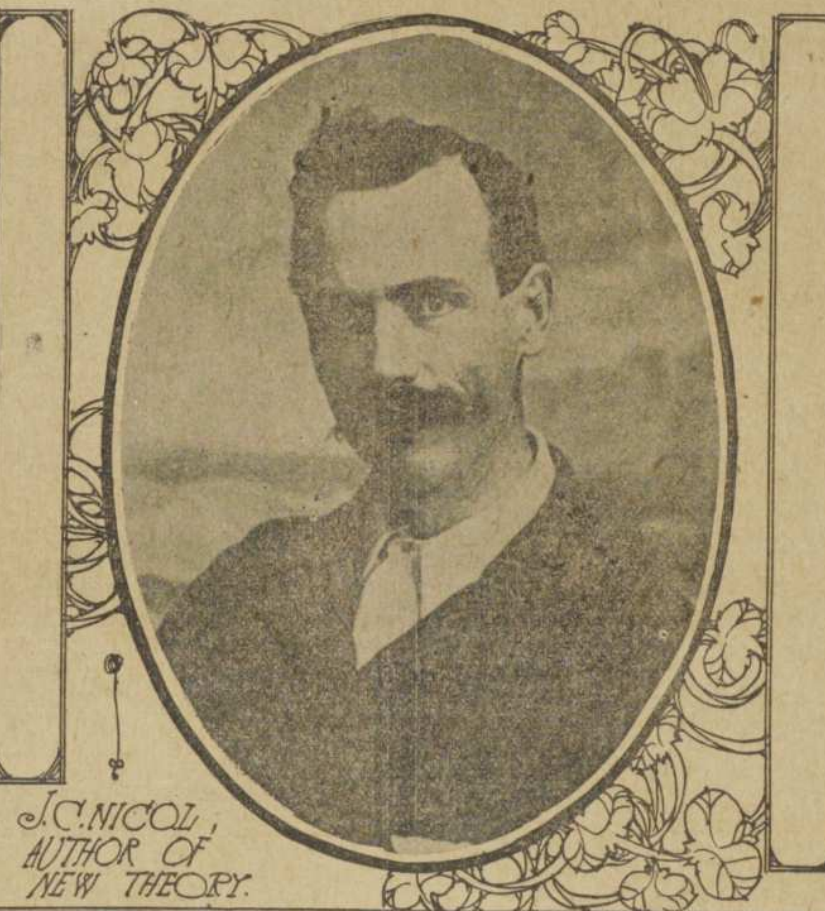

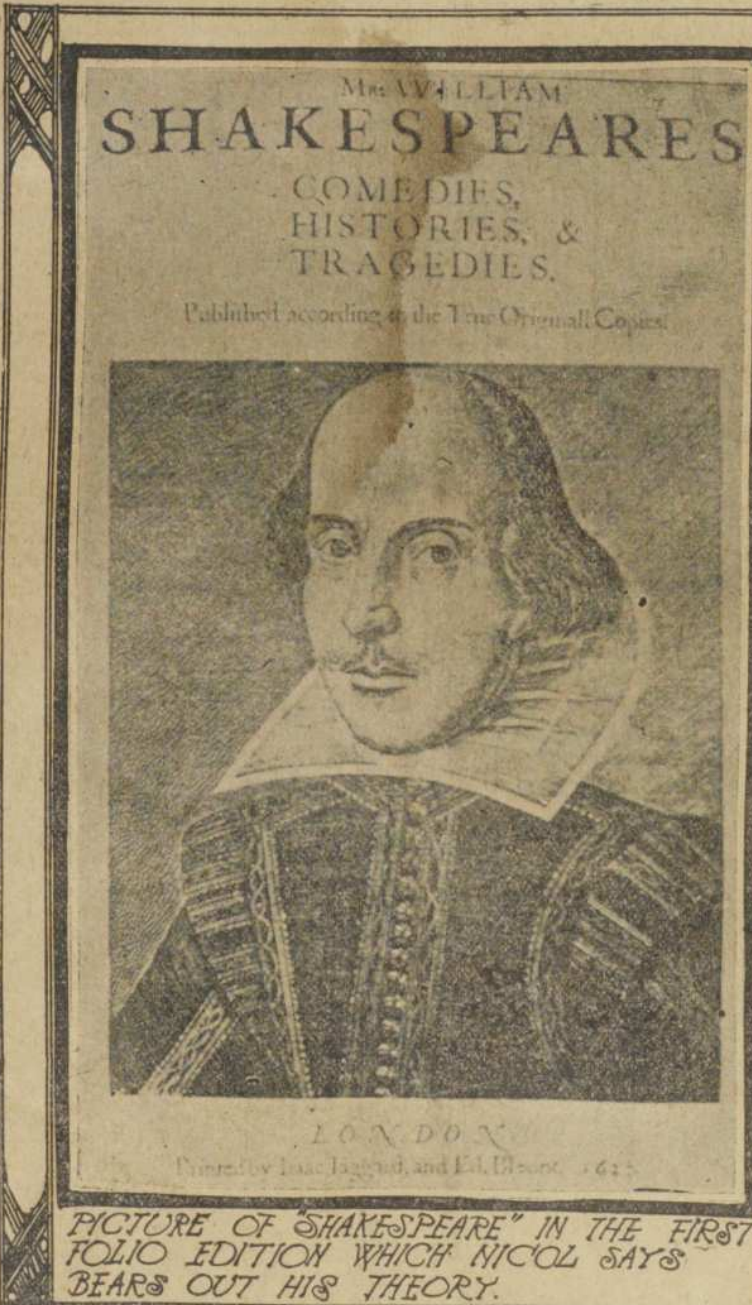

"In the Richard Burbage cypher, which appears in the words supposedly written by Hugh Holland, the manuscript of Richard III. is indicated as having been hidden in Crosby Hall, London.

"As to bringing the manuscript to light, I have already approached certain authorities in the matter, and if the Government does not take the investigation up with a view to restoring the long-lost documents to the nation who should own them, some private individual may help toward this object. In the venture I shall continue my deciphering of the Folio with a view to publishing my researches eventually to the world. I shall have no difficulty in satisfying the experts that the real author of the plays now attributed to Shakespeare was no other than Henry Wriothesley, third Earl of Southampton."

May Test Theory.

Whether the British Government pays any attention to Nicol's suggestions or not, there is more than a chance that the latter's assertions that some of the "Shakespeare" manuscripts are hidden at Crosby Hall may be proved or disproved comparatively soon. For unless within a few weeks $50,000 is raised in addition to the $250,000 already pledged, this fine old relic of feudal times in London will be demolished to make way for the modern office structure to be occupied by the Chartered Bank. If that is done, a careful search will be made for relics in the old building, and if the manuscripts are anywhere hidden there, undoubtedly they will be brought to light. And then, perhaps, the question of who was "Shakespeare" will be settled once and for all.

STORY OF PLOT TO KILL GOEBELTold On Witness Stand By
F. W. Golden.Powers Said Contestant Must Be Put Away.Discussed Several Plans For the Murder.

YOUTSEY TESTIFIES MONDAY.

Georgetown, Ky., Dec. 7.—[Special.]—F. Wharton Golden, of Knox county, by his own confession implicated with Caleb Powers in the alleged Goebel murder conspiracy for which Powers is again on trial in the Scott Circuit Court, went upon the witness stand to-day and told the jury of his own connection under the guiding hand, as he says, of W. S. Taylor, Charles Finley and this defendant.

As on former trials of Powers, and Jim Howard, and Henry E. Youtsey, Golden went fully into the details of the plans made in the winter of 1899-90 to intimidate State Assemblymen and Democratic leaders of Kentucky by a show of armed force, and, failing in that, to bring on a fight in the legislative halls and take the life of William Goebel.

Goebel Must Die.

In response to questions on direct examination by the Commonwealth, Golden told of declarations to him and in his presence by Taylor, Finley and Powers that Goebel would have to be killed as the only means of settling the gubernatorial contest in Taylor's favor. On this subject he said he had numerous conversations with the defendant on trial, discussing even in detail the best means of bringing the active life of the Democratic leader to a close.

The story of Golden has been told on the witness stand quite a number of times since the day of the murder, he being the first of the alleged conspirators to go on the stand, but it has lost none of its interest, to judge by the close and patient hearing given to it by Judge, jury and court officials. He told it in a weak, but distinct voice and also of how Arthur Goebel, brother of the murdered man, has kept him in employment and in a beautiful climate in order to keep off the ravages of lung trouble so that he might be preserved as a witness. The story was impressively told and the witness was not shaken on cross-examination. He was on the stand for over three hours to-day and goes back again Monday morning for completion of the cross-examination. This will be completed Monday, and Henry Youtsey will then go on for the Commonwealth. His examination, direct and cross, will occupy an entire day or longer, and the case for the State may not be closed before Wednesday afternoon or Thursday. It will require at least two weeks to present the case for the defense.

Attempt to Intimidate.

That the publication in the Lexington Republican newspaper of yesterday to the effect that Attorney General Breathitt would take a hand in prosecuting star witness for the State in the Goebel murder cases was intended to affect Commonwealth witnesses, as State Attorney Franklin charged last night, was somewhat evidenced to-day when Wharton Golden found a copy of the newspaper in his mail. He turned it over to Mr. Franklin. That official interrogated the correspondent here for the paper and ascertained that the matter, already typewritten, was handed to him by W. Owens, of Barbourville, a young man who has been here with the defense since the beginning of the trial. He called the matter to the attention of Judge Morris and asked a rule against Owens, returnable Monday next, for contempt. Judge Morris heard the rule. Attorneys for the defense say they know nothing of the story, and did not hear of it until Attorney Franklin called attention to it and asked for the rule against Owens.

To Kill Goebel On Street.

When Golden took the stand at the opening of court the defense asked permission to put a few preliminary questions. They had Golden start that he was under indictment along with the defendant Powers in this case, and he said that he was a voluntary witness. The Commonwealth offered and asked Golden to identify letters or other communications given him by W. S. Taylor and Charles. The defense objected, and the court sustained the objection, ruling that it was incompetent as evidence at this time.

Golden, in response to questions put by Judge Williams, in conversations had with Caleb Powers in January, 1900, relative to killing William Goebel. The witness said that he was suggested to have Goebel killed on the streets of Frankfort, but Powers did not agree that it could be done, saying that the police of Frankfort would kill the man who attacked Goebel. I thought our mountain men could protect them and take them safely back to the mountains. In another conversation we discussed the killing of Goebel at the Capital Hotel. It was suggested that some of our men start a chain fight in the dining-room of the hotel, and that Goebel be killed as if by accident, as being a safe one for the man who would go the killing."

"What next, did you do with reference to the plan to kill Goebel?" asked Judge Williams.

Campbell while in Cincinnati. The defense attorney then took Golden over the testimony regarding his association with Caleb and John Powers the day before the shooting of Goebel. At 12:30 o'clock Judge Morris interrupted the cross-examination and adjourned court for the day.

SEVEN-TON GRAVESTONE

(Colorado Springs Special to New York Times.) A granite boulder weighing seven tons, found in the Ute Pass, west of Colorado Springs, was to-day consigned to Baltimore as a monument to mark the grave of the late A. C. Hunt, Territorial Governor of Colorado from 1867 to 1869. The boulder was selected in accordance with the wishes of Mrs. Hunt and her family, acting with Gen. William J. Palmer.

A statue will later be erected on the boulder. With Gen. Palmer and W. Greenwood, Hunt incorporated the Denver and Rio Grande railroad. He had a record as an Indian fighter, and was once president of the Colorado Vigilantes.

had fighting men from the mountains to Frankfort. They were to be brought in by the train. The witnesses in the contest for the offices. Their qualifications were to be their ability to handle 45-caliber Colt's guns. Powers gave me $150 and sent me to Bell and Harlan counties to get these witnesses. He told me to see Jim Bingham at Pineville, and to see either John B. Hurrett, the postmaster, or Hump H. Howard, in Harlan county. I went first to Pineville and saw Bingham. I told him that we wanted fighting men and gave him $50 to pay the expenses to Frankfort. From Harlan, Va., I telephoned to Hump Howard at Harlan courthouse to get ten or fifteen men to go to Frankfort. That was January 12. I went on horseback that night to Harlan courthouse and Howard had ten men at the door. He told me that he had killed from two to five men. I gave him $75 to pay the expenses to Frankfort."

Receipt Given Powers.

Witness here exhibited to the jury a receipt he had given Powers for $150 and receipts he had taken from Bingham and Howard for the money given to them. Judge Williams had read to the jury the powers which later passed between Caleb Powers and Hump H. Howard relative to Harlan county's quota of the "mountain army" of January 25, 1900.

Golden next told of having participated with Charles Finley and Caleb Powers in the gathering together of the "mountain army" in the latter part of January. He had been temporarily away from these defendants because of the shooting of his brother, Ben Golden, in the pistol duel between Col. Colonel and Ethelbert Scott, on January 16. He detailed occurrences of the gathering of the "mountain army" at the instance of Powers. At Barbourville depot he heard Finley tell W. P. Reeder that Goebel would be killed after the men got to Frankfort.

Must Kill Goebel.

Answering further questions, Golden told of two conversations had with W. S. Taylor at about this time. "One day as I walked down to the Executive Mansion with Gov. Taylor he referred to the contest for his office. He said it looked like it was pretty certain that he would be unelected unless Goebel was killed. He said that he could do nothing, but that the young men who expected office ought to have as much interest in the matter as he had. Everybody knew what the mountain men were there for. Before that time I had frequently seen Combs and Moersmith together stationed at a street corner where Goebel had to pass."

Asked as to his movements on the day of the shooting Golden said: "I had arranged to go to Louisville that morning to see my brother. I met Caleb Powers at his office and told him I was going. He said he would go with me. John L. Powers and Walter Day were there also going along. As we started out of the building to go to the railroad station Caleb suggested that we should go to the street corner where Goebel had to pass. We boarded the train and at Lagrange received information of the shooting of Goebel. Caleb said it was a 'damned shame,' and looked pleased and John Powers said he was glad of it. Walter Day never looked up from the paper he was reading. On our arrival at Louisville Caleb said it might look bad for us to be away from Frankfort and that we should go back on the first train. We did so, leaving Louisville at 2 o'clock."

Powers Has Pistol.

"On the train Caleb suggested that he might be arrested on reaching Frankfort and suggested that we take our pistols. We did so, but later buckled them on because of the presence of some Frankfort Democrats on the train. Arriving at Frankfort, we left the train in front of the State House and entered between the soldiers at the gate and immediately went to the office of the Adjutant General and put on the uniform of a soldier. I being a member of John Powers' military company. Later in the afternoon I met Jim Howard at the Executive building. He wanted to join our military company. I took the matter up with John and Caleb Powers, and Caleb told us not to enlist him, but to tell him that the company was full. At that time we had in the company

What Army Was For.

At another point Golden said: "I heard Tallow Dick Combs say in the office of the Adjutant General in the presence of Mason Moersmith, Gardner Wallace and John Powers that he could kill Goebel as far as he could see him. He also said that he thought the matter as to be done, everybody knew what the mountain men were there for. Before that time I had frequently seen Combs and Moersmith together stationed at a street corner where Goebel had to pass."

only sixty of the eighty men to which I was entitled. I stayed with him only a few minutes, returning to the Statehouse. I went back there for the purpose of informing Caleb Powers. I did so, and he said: "What, let them put you in jail if they will. Tell them you don't know anything. They are not after you little fellows. They are after me."

"That determined me in the matter." I did so, and he said: "I went back over to the hotel. I took Dr. Frewitt, of the hospital department of the guard, with me. There I met Col. T. C. Campbell. I remained in Croswell and Campbell's room only long enough to tell them that if they would go with me away from Frankfort, where I was in danger of being killed, I would tell them all I knew. They arranged, and we did go, in company with Commonwealth's Attorney Franklin, to Cincinnati. There, in a room at the Glens House, I told them regarding what I knew. They are not after you little fellows. They are after me."

The cross-examination was conducted by Mr. Sims, of the defense. He first had the witness state that he did

MORE MEN AFTER THE COLONELS

Thomas W. Ryan and Others Want To Buy Louisville Ball Club.

TO PAY REASONABLE FIGURE.

Minneapolis and St. Paul To Be Shifted To Chicago In American Association.

OTHER BASEBALL GOSSIP.

PLANS are being formulated by a number of local capitalists for the purpose of organizing a company to purchase the Louisville ball club. Thomas W. Ryan, who is trying to form a company, will call a meeting one day this week and have the several men to attend who have expressed their desire to become managers, providing the club can be bought at a reasonable figure. "Just for the moment," said Mr. Ryan, "I don't care to disclose who my associates are in this attempt to buy the control of the Colonels, but I will say this, that I fully expect to be able to give out to the local fans the names of the men who are willing to become stockholders in the Louisville club."

Continuing, Mr. Ryan said: "I want to know just how much money we can procure and then we will place ourselves in communication with Mr. Tetsau and ask him to name us the lowest figure. I am anxious to make the club a local affair and to be owned by local lovers of the sport. I think that the fans will support us."

Mr. Ryan is sincere in his efforts to buy the club, as he is keen and anxious to become a baseball manager, and if he can raise sufficient funds he will find that he will not experience any trouble in buying the club at a reasonable figure.

President Barker, when informed that there was a movement on foot by local people to buy the Louisville ball club, said: "I am glad to hear of it, and hope that there will be something to it and not mere idle talk. If the persons who are anxious to become owners of the local baseball plant are really in earnest, let them come to see me and I will talk the matter over and will make them realize that they are satisfied that only local people will be interested, and that the purchase of the club will not be for the purpose of using it as a training school for some major league manager, but will let go of his holdings in the local team at a fair price. The purchase price, he made seven home runs in six consecutive days. The record is: Joe Fitzer, the only other candidate for the captaincy, was defeated, nine votes to six. Ruth is a fine, all-around athlete, a hard worker and a good student, and under his leadership the blind boys expect to develop even a better team next year than that which represented the institution this season. Ruth has played right tackle on the Blind School team for the past four years and has been one of the mainstays of the 'blind' line. He has been prominent in track and field athletics and will be a member of the indoor team which will represent the Blind School in the First Regiment meet."

American Association, is almost as good as the major leagues."

Minneapolis Is the Club.

"Should the American Association invade Chicago the coming season, which is not only possible, but probable, it will no doubt be surprising to learn that the club to be shifted will be Minneapolis and not St. Paul, as generally predicted," said a well known major league magnate to-day while discussing the report from Chicago that the association intended making demands on the major leagues for more concessions regarding the drafting of players, etc.

What Ban Johnson Says.

The determined stand taken by President Ban Johnson, of the American League, against granting concessions to the Class A minor leagues—the Eastern League and American Association—as announced in an interview in Chicago the other day, has caused all kinds of disputes between the baseball magnates and followers. Ban Johnson claimed that he was led to take the stand he did through the efforts of the American Association to create trouble by breaking into Chicago, which would be a violation of the national agreement, thus making the Association an outlaw organization. President Johnson said he was willing to assist in granting concessions to the Class A minor leagues, but he would not try to do so hard at times to boost the minor leagues by giving them special class privileges and even to raise the drafting price, but he drew the line when the two big minors tried to make trouble for the majors.

When asked for his version of the affair President Johnson said: "The minors have been treated since the organization of the National Commission than ever before. They have been given every consideration and the proposed purchase of the minors by selling players—that is, many of them—that they have made from the clubs returns at a high price. If it was not for the sale of players some of them would be put out of business. The minors do not want to have the sale of players prohibited, no matter how they may say they do."

"If the minor leagues wanted to stop the drafting of players, they should stop the sale of players, and the sale of players, which they voted down the resolution I offered at Cincinnati three years ago, with the consent of the commission, to restrict each major league club to four players by draft or purchase each year."

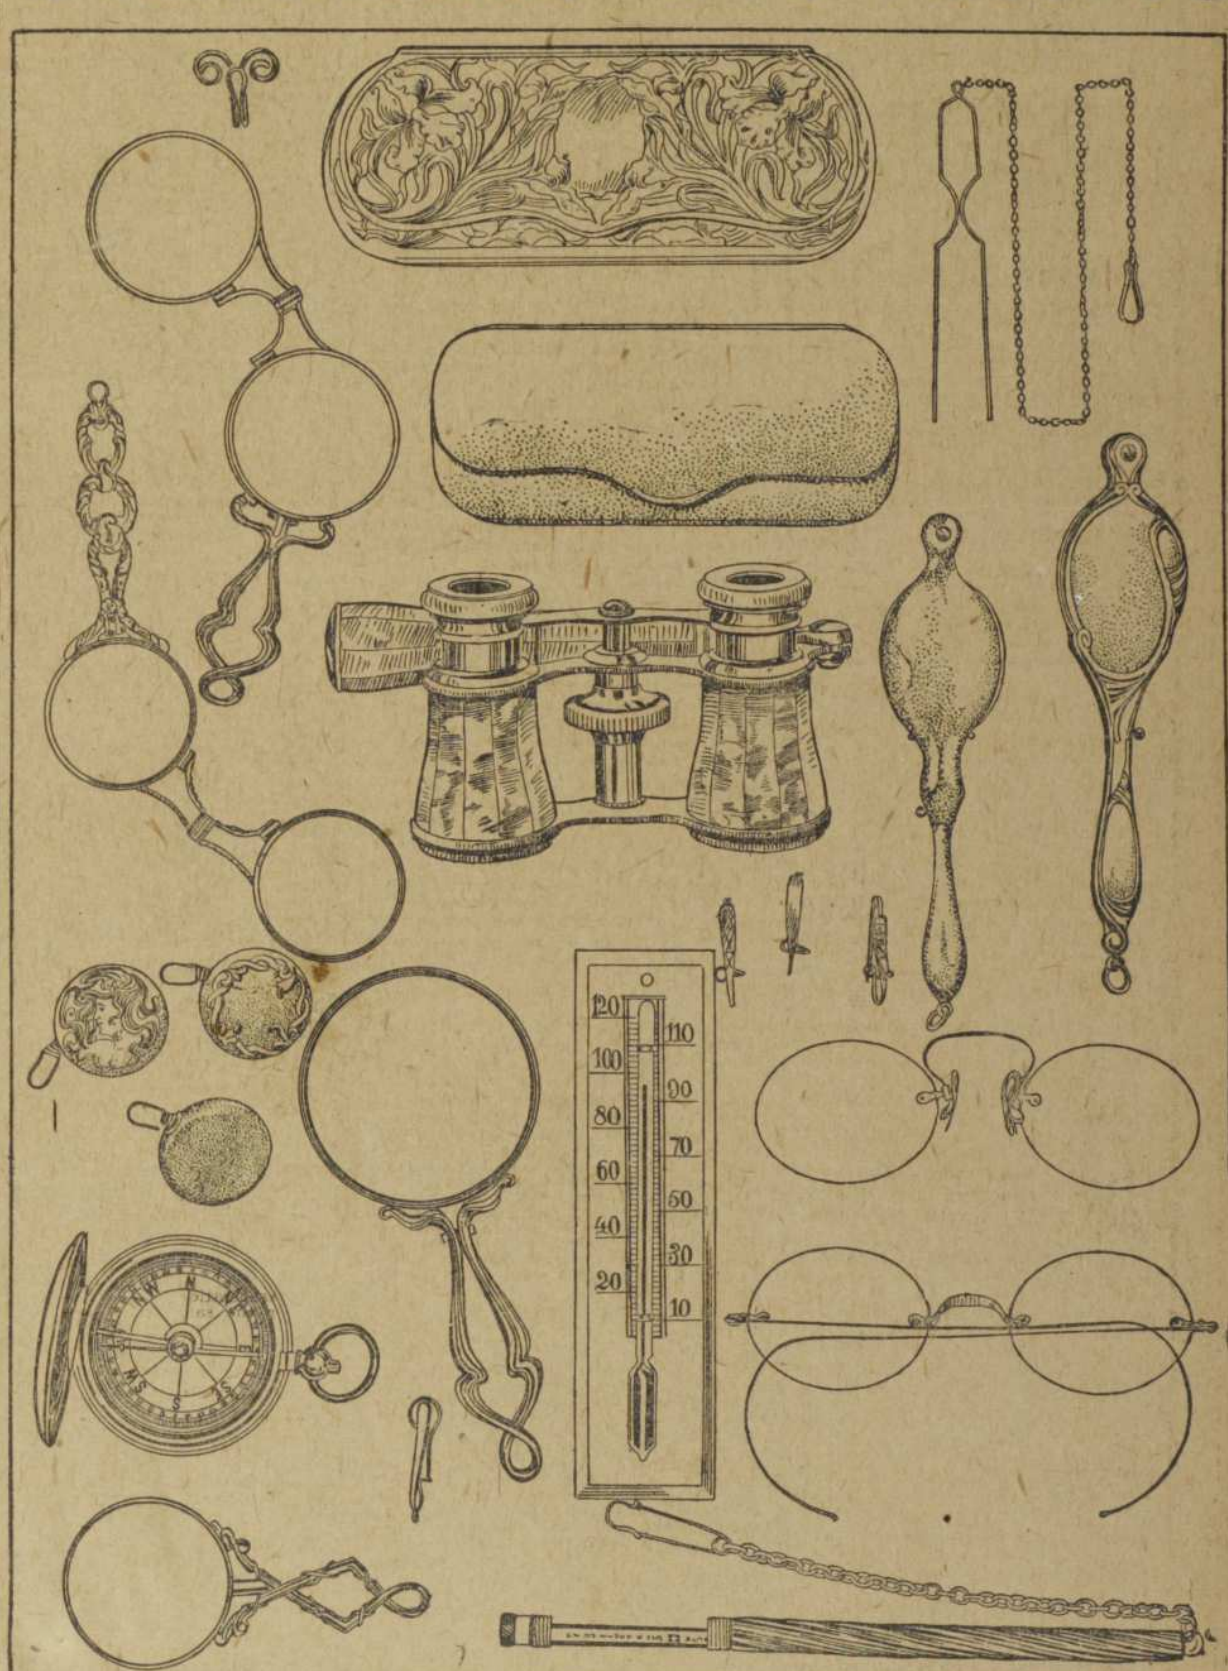

INTERESTING FACTS CONCERNING THE AMERICAN ASSOCIATION BATTERS FROM OFFICIAL AVERAGES

HOME RUNS. Only ten players made five home runs or more. The record of John Freeman is remarkable. He made seven home runs in six consecutive days. The record is: Joe Fitzer, the only other candidate for the captaincy, was defeated, nine votes to six. national Association of Minor Leagues turned down that offer simply, because they did not want to be stopped from selling their players to the major leagues. That rule would have limited each major league club to four players by draft or purchase from the minors, whereas now a player can be drafted and buy as many as fifteen to twenty men. The minor league magnates themselves who are anxious to sell their players, otherwise they would not try so hard at times to boost the minor leagues by giving them special class privileges and even to raise the drafting price, but he drew the line when the two big minors tried to make trouble for the majors.

When asked for his version of the affair President Johnson said: "The minors have been treated since the organization of the National Commission than ever before. They have been given every consideration and the proposed purchase of the minors by selling players—that is, many of them—that they have made from the clubs returns at a high price. If it was not for the sale of players some of them would be put out of business. The minors do not want to have the sale of players prohibited, no matter how they may say they do."

"If the minor leagues wanted to stop the drafting of players, they should stop the sale of players, and the sale of players, which they voted down the resolution I offered at Cincinnati three years ago, with the consent of the commission, to restrict each major league club to four players by draft or purchase each year."

son by a club is a move in the right direction. There is no reason why a club—any major league club—should not be able to get along with eighteen to twenty players. With a limit on the number of men to be carried by each club there would be many good men thrown back to the minor leagues. It would also be the means of cutting down the number of drafted and purchased men each fall."

Minors To Meet Majors. The first conference between a special committee appointed by President Powers, of the National Association of Minor Leagues, and the National Commission will take place in Cincinnati January 6, says a special from Cleveland.

This announcement has been made by Secretary Farrell. As a result the plan of the National League magnates to have the minors tell their grievances to the meeting in New York next week has fallen through, and instead of dealing with one organization the committee will be able to place the whole matter before the commission next month. At this conference the minor leagues will place the problem of drafting and purchasing players before the commission, and also will take some action in regard to reinstatement by the National Commission of players under the ban of the National Association. But the momentous question is the draft and purchasing of

ABOUT MATCHES

Choice Wood Utilized In Their Manufacture.

BY-PRODUCT THEN MADE INTO DOORS AND SHEDS.

THREE MILLION ARE BURNED EVERY 24 HOURS.

AMERICA THE BIGGEST USER.

The civilized nations of the world strike 3,000,000 every minute of the twenty-four hours, says the Washington correspondent of the Brooklyn Eagle. Nearly one-half of these are burned in the United States. Americans use up the enormous total of seven hundred billions a year and have a larger match bill than any other nation in the world. Hundreds of factories over the country are engaged in this industry, about which the general public knows little. The plants are very large, one on the Pacific coast covering 20 acres, with thirty-two miles of railroad, which supply the match machines with 200,000 feet of sugar pine and yellow pine logs a day.

A statement of the number of cubic feet of wood which actually is converted into matches each year would convey only an inadequate idea of the numbers of trees that are felled for the purpose. For the manufacture of the match the best grade of wood is necessary. Sapwood, knot and cross-grained timber will not do. This makes it necessary to search the best forests and pick out the choice trees only, and nothing but the choice portions of the best trees go to the match machines. It may be seen that the lumberman sweeps over a wide area in search of suitable timber to feed into the match machines.

Seldom is the little splinter tipped with sulphur or some other substance to be ignited by friction given even scant mention in the consideration of the depletion of the world's forest. For the match industry is one of the most important of the world's industries, and the match industry is one of the most important of the world's industries.

It might be supposed that because matches are small the makers of them would utilize scraps and off-cuts. This is never the case. Matches are not by-products. The match machine takes the finest timber and what it rejects goes to the by-product yard, and the by-product end of the match business becomes the largest and so far as bulk is concerned, among the by-products of the world. The large Pacific coast factory just mentioned are 1,000 doors and 800 sheds daily.

As a matter of fact, it would be impossible to carry on the match business at all at present prices. If the rejected lumber were not sent into something else, the room where matches are made is frequently the smallest department of a match factory. The larger portions contain the sawmills and planing mills, where doors, sash, shingles, lath, siding, posts, cordwood and many other commodities are made ready for market.

This country, although it has the most abundant material and the finest machinery in the world for the purpose, does not manufacture enough matches to supply the home market. Thousands of dollars worth are annually imported from Germany, Austria, France, Sweden and other countries where they are made by cheaper labor and poorer machinery, and usually from higher-priced wood, though it is not better than what is grown in the American forests. The imports are made ready for market, which can be struck only on the box or other specially prepared surfaces. Wood for matches is a much more serious problem in some of the European countries than it yet is in the United States. The most suitable match timber is pine, linden, aspen, white cedar, poplar, birch and willow. Others, however, are occasionally used. Germany imports willow and aspen from Russia. Some time ago the German match manufacturers petitioned the Minister of Agriculture to cause the forests to be planted with the State forests to supply wood for matches without importing. A similar petition to their Government was presented by the French manufacturers of matches who wanted a home supply.

BELMONT PARK OF THE SOUTH

Handsomeness New Track At New Orleans Ready For Opening.

RACES BEGIN TO-MORROW.

Description of the Grandstand, Betting Ring, Jockeys' Quarters, Offices, Etc.

LENS IN SPLENDID FORM.

NEW ORLEANS, La., Dec. 7.—(Special.)—Everything is in readiness for the opening at the Fair Grounds on Monday, where the thoroughbred will reign supreme for two weeks. The same horses and the same jockeys that made the first two weeks at City Park so successful will be on hand at the new track. The handicaps and stakes races will be about the same in value, but with good weather promised some of the crack Eastern horses will be engaged in the various races, and chances will not be lacking, as has been the rule in a large number of races at City Park.

When the gates of the new track are thrown open tomorrow and the public will hardly recognize the Fair Grounds as the same old track. As the oldest track in the United States to-day it is also the newest and most improved. It can be classed as the Belmont Park of the South. Hard work during the summer months and all fall has left only a few minor details to be completed. The cost of the work already done amounts to more than $200,000 and when the work is completed it will represent an outlay of close to a quarter of a million dollars.

The track, with its improvements, as it stands to-day, is surpassed by none in the country. Belmont Park is larger and much more money was, of course, spent there, but it is not any more attractive than the Fair Grounds. Horsemen never entered a better-equipped or more comfortable track than the Fair Grounds. A new grandstand with an actual seating capacity of more than 5,000, a new steel and inclosed paddock, one of the largest betting rings outside of the Metropolitan circuit, beautiful lawn, modern improvements, sanitary arrangements and other excellent appointments are all to be found.

The new grandstand is a replica of the old Union Park stand at St. Louis; in fact, the iron and steel work was brought from Union Park and used in the erection of the Fair Grounds structure. Entirely of steel, iron and all-steel pine, the stand has been totally rebuilt. Leading from the lawn to the seats are eight pairs of steps and under each is an office of some sort. The main stairway is immediately within the main entrance. Directly to the right of the main entrance, on the ground floor of the grandstand, is the restaurant and kitchen. The auxiliary entrance is reached from the rear of the grandstand. This stairway is used mainly in making trips to the betting ring.

A long walk, covered and inclosed in glass, leads directly to the grandstand. This walk is excellently lighted by sunlight in good weather and by electricity in inclement weather. The walk makes it possible for the patrons to leave the street cars and go direct into the stand without being exposed to the weather at any time. The ground space given over to vehicles is more than 100 by 200 feet in area and is so arranged and laid out that parties can remain in their autos and witness the races from them and see the running from every point.

An extensive lawn 90 feet in width and over 200 feet in length extends from the lower steps of the grandstand to within three feet of the outside rail of the track. This lawn is an excellent place for the spectators. The remainder of the lawn lies in front of the paddock, and is beautifully sodded. A cement walk has been placed around the grandstand in the rear from the main entrance to the entrance near the betting ring, which will prevent congestion when large crowds are in attendance.

The betting ring is no large that over 100 knights of the shanks can do business without crowding themselves or the bettors. The ring is excellently lighted by means of high glass windows in good weather, while hundreds of incandescent lights have been provided for use on dark and gloomy days. The betting ring is the largest south of Chicago and is better equipped in the way of lights and facilities than any track outside of New York. At the right of the betting ring is the office of the manager, where the supplies are kept.

From the betting ring an inclosed walk leads to the paddock. This walk is fifteen or twenty feet wide. The paddock is completely inclosed and has eighteen stalls, with room for six more in the event they are needed. Each stall can be ventilated without interference with any other. A large sliding gate leads to the track. Near the paddock is the entrance to the secretary's office, while another entrance leads to the stewards' quarters, which has been magnificently furnished. Next to the stewards' office is the hospital, which has all of the necessities that might be called for in case of accident.

Over the secretary's office is the jockeys' quarters, and the riders will find one of the most comfortable places they have had around any track. Jockeys are provided for each rider, and arrangements have been made for the keeping of the owners' colors where they are easily obtainable. The shower bath is also provided for the use of the jockeys. As are the best at any track in the country. Space on the roof of the office in the paddock has been set aside for the riders to witness the races when they are not riding.

Because of the change in the position of the grandstand, which has been moved about seventy-five feet further down the stretch, the judges' stand has also been moved. This stand is built entirely of frame, inclosed in glass, and is not subject to the "deceptive" angle in the same degree as at other tracks. New stands in the infield have been erected for the timers and other officials. The press stand is thirty-four feet in length and about one-half as wide. It is also directly behind the judges' stand and affords a good view of the finish. The entire front is inclosed in heavy French plate glass.

The promenade on the upper floor of the grandstand is one of the features for the female patrons. There are fifty boxes at the upper end, each having seats for four persons. The veranda at the end of the grandstand and immediately over the main entrance commands a fine view of the track, and also enables owners of vehicles to give instructions to their drivers or chauffeurs.

The most sensational feature of the week has been the racing of Lens, a slug-like-looking brown gelding from the stable of P. J. Dunn, one of the best trainers of a thoroughbred in the land. This son of Star Shoot—Queen Dixon has pulled down four races for his proprietor, and each time succeeded in standing the terrific stretch drive from a slim opposition before getting the money. His first victory came when he beat Red and Dargie, the three being heads up. In his next effort he had to stand a grueling battle with Hawkman. Dunn he wore down Al Muller, the up-and-coming colt of W. H. Fisher, and won by a head and in his next effort beat The Bear, Prince Ahmed, Carthage, Jacobite and other good ones.

Lens was a prominent candidate for the Kentucky Derby this season, when he won to Pink Star. Owner Dunn did not think that the gelding would be able to negotiate the Derby route, however, and threw him out of training after the Lexington meeting. With a long rest, Lens picked up in weight to such an extent it was difficult to get him ready for the races again. At Latonia he won a couple of races, but was not at his best. After going to New Orleans he was given a lot of work owing to the heavy entry in the contest, and in his first start was not ready for a brushing battle. He starts his race in pleasing fashion. Owner Dunn received an offer of $10,000 for Lens from Edward O'Brien, but refused to dispose of the Star Shoot gelding.

ing. He does not think that Lens will be able to win over a distance of ground, but believes that the son of Star Shoot will be able to hold his own with any of the speedy sprinters. Lens has been secured as a yearling by Dunn for a really a song, and has proved to be one of the best investments in horseflesh ever made by the shrewd owner.

Dave Nicol is back in the saddle again. A petition signed by all of the horsemen requesting the reinstatement of the rider was presented to Starter Dade, who gave Nicol ten days on the ground. He is beating the barrier with Panet in the Thanksgiving Handicap, but Dade refused to restore Nicol to good standing. The officials were then appealed to, and Nicol was given the privilege of accepting mounts.

Notter and Nicol are securing the choicest mounts. When an owner has a "good thing," which is to be bet on, the first thing he does is to secure either Nicol or Notter. They are known as the "money-bag boys" and so far have been successful in every effort on heavily-backed horses. The ability of Nicol is well known to Louisvilleans, but it doubtful if he has any edge on Notter. The latter will redoubt season for James R. Keene. He is unquestionably a rider of merit. Notter uses excellent judgment at all times with his mounts, which in a large measure accounts for his success.

Charles Koerner, the Louisville boy, has "died to come up" to expect him to do it. He has had some fairly good runs, but he has not put up any great rides. He was suspended for four days by Starter Dade for breaking up a possible start with Lucy Young, but is in good at all again. Wade O. Joplin thinks that Koerner will round into form before long, and has made some good engagements for the Louisville boy for the coming week. The all-Koerner received when Severus fell did not take any of his nerve away, but he will get through the smallest opening if he has an opportunity.

Little Theodore Koerner, a brother of Charles Koerner, showed a flash of ability in a couple of races, and was trusted with the handling of Ed Kane last Saturday. He missed up things to such an extent that he has not ridden any more since, but just the same many shrewd owners predict a promising future for the little fellow.

Horsemen are clamoring for another starter. A. B. Dade, who is doing the commencing pending the arrival of Mars Cassidy, continues to dispatch the fields in ragged fashion. Louisvilleans who witnessed the wonderful work of Dade at Douglas Park will not believe it possible for him to be starting in such poor form. There is no question about the ability of Dade, who is a good fellow in all that the term implies, but at present his work is so bad that even his best friends are forced to admit that something is wrong. Good horses sometimes train off, only to come back after a rest and show a flash of their former speed again. It is probably a rare case that Mr. Dade is in. He has had a strenuous season, and when he has a relaxation from work for a couple of weeks, he sometimes returns to his work in condition for excellent starting. Mars Cassidy does not know when he will arrive, owing to the serious illness of his wife, but is expected along before City Park throws open its gates again.

"and no one realizes that fact any better than I do," don't expect it to continue long, but think that things will break better as soon as the riders become accustomed to my ways. The riders here came from all parts of the country and it takes some little time to get them used to my order of operating, but this will be done before long, and then I expect to get good breaks. This shows that Mr. Dade has the right idea.

The proposed match race between W. H. Fisher's Pinkola, a speedy son of the great Pink Coat, and Burlew & O'Neill's Chapultepec, one of the star Eastern sprinters, is off. Despite flattering inducements by the management of the Fair Grounds, the owners of these star two-year-old performers have decided that a match race would not be best for their thoroughbreds. The respective owners of the two great youngsters could not agree upon the weights and the distance for the race.

Chapultepec made his first appearance of the winter season on Thursday. He was in with an ordinary lot of two-year-olds, and the high-stroke operators made a noble attempt to get the best of him. Chapultepec led off five and one-half furlongs in the fast time for the distance during the meeting with such ease that it left no doubt in the minds of the spectators that he was the better horse.

Dr. Williams has done as much for football at Pennsylvania as George Woodruff did. It was Woodruff who brought Pennsylvania to the front in the football world, fifteen years ago, and made the Red and Blue a permanent member of the "Big Four." But Woodruff did not keep the Quakers on top. The Red and Blue began to lose prestige in 1900, and in 1904 was at a low ebb in football matters. The next year Dr. Williams, who had been a great quarterback under Woodruff, was put at the helm. He went at his work quietly and without ostentation, and made himself famous the first year by holding Harvard to a 11-0 score and beating Cornell 12 to 11, after the Ithacans led by 11 to 0 at the close of the first half. All this time Dr. Williams was developing a new coaching system, and now Pennsylvania has half a dozen men who are capable enough to assume charge of things. In 1904 and 1905 Dr. Williams had his best teams, beating Harvard twice in decisive fashion. The 1906 eleven was just a little below these on account of the inability of the coaches to find a quarterback. But this year the Red and are several members of the present freshman team who are much of variety material. The freshman eleven this year was undoubtedly stronger than the 94 boys, and made the varsity in every time the two lined up. In fact, the freshman back field was nearly as good as that of the varsity. The best players on the freshman team were Favorite, the old Excelsior boy at fullback, and Ben from Utah, at fullback. These two youngsters were always hard to hold, and made many good gains past such strong defensive backs as Powell, Greene and Hollenback. The freshman quarterback, Wallace Johnson, will make Kelnath hustle for his position. Johnson is the man who as a schoolboy won the Western tennis championship and made such a sensational bid for national honors at Newport last summer. He is nearly as good on the gridiron as on the tennis court, and is favorably considered for next year's varsity. There are several other stars on the freshman team who will help out in the line, and with such a splendid squad of substitutes the Red and Blue is sure to be as powerful on the gridiron as ever.

Joe Tinker has disposed of his Kansas City property and also a chicken ranch in Kansas and will become a permanent Chicago resident.

lectors that he would make Pinkola tip along in lively fashion to trim him.

Fred Burlew, senior partner in the firm of Burlew & O'Neill, however, does not underestimate the ability of Pinkola. "I don't know whether Chapultepec can trim Pinkola or not," said Burlew. "I think so, or I would not have proposed a match race, but I would not bet much on the money." Fisher, however, expects to win the Derby here and the Kentucky Derby at Churchill Downs with Pinkola, so he refused the offer. In speaking of the matter he said:

"I was offered a large sum for Pinkola but I really amounts to but little when you take into consideration the honor that goes to the owner of a Derby winner. Pinkola is engaged in the City Park Derby, the Crescent City Derby, the Latonia Derby and the Kentucky Derby. If he wins any one of these events I will be even for the amount I have refused, and I think it possible that I may win two of the derbies. I would have a hard time beating Chapultepec with Pinkola at short distance, but think that Pinkola will trim him when it comes down to a real hard race over a distance of ground."

FIGURING ON NEXT SEASON'S ELEVEN

Pennsylvania To Lose Four Veterans, But Much Good Material Is Left.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Dec. 7.—With one of Pennsylvania's most successful football seasons at an end, the Quakers are beginning to look forward to next year, both in regard to the 1908 schedule and the material which must form the nucleus for the team. Big changes are in prospect, but the campaign will not be planned until after the annual meeting of the Athletic Association next week. Pennsylvania men are lamenting quite as much over the decision of Dr. Carl Williams, the chairman of the Advisory Board, to retire from all coaching, as upon the loss of four veteran players from this year's team. Dr. Williams was dejected of giving up the gridiron two years ago, after he had coached two teams that beat Harvard in successive years. This fall he has announced that under no circumstances will he coach again, and that other men must continue his work.

All this time Dr. Williams was developing a new coaching system, and now Pennsylvania has half a dozen men who are capable enough to assume charge of things. In 1904 and 1905 Dr. Williams had his best teams, beating Harvard twice in decisive fashion. The 1906 eleven was just a little below these on account of the inability of the coaches to find a quarterback. But this year the Red and are several members of the present freshman team who are much of variety material. The freshman eleven this year was undoubtedly stronger than the 94 boys, and made the varsity in every time the two lined up. In fact, the freshman back field was nearly as good as that of the varsity. The best players on the freshman team were Favorite, the old Excelsior boy at fullback, and Ben from Utah, at fullback. These two youngsters were always hard to hold, and made many good gains past such strong defensive backs as Powell, Greene and Hollenback. The freshman quarterback, Wallace Johnson, will make Kelnath hustle for his position. Johnson is the man who as a schoolboy won the Western tennis championship and made such a sensational bid for national honors at Newport last summer. He is nearly as good on the gridiron as on the tennis court, and is favorably considered for next year's varsity. There are several other stars on the freshman team who will help out in the line, and with such a splendid squad of substitutes the Red and Blue is sure to be as powerful on the gridiron as ever.

Dr. Williams has done as much for football at Pennsylvania as George Woodruff did. It was Woodruff who brought Pennsylvania to the front in the football world, fifteen years ago, and made the Red and Blue a permanent member of the "Big Four." But Woodruff did not keep the Quakers on top. The Red and Blue began to lose prestige in 1900, and in 1904 was at a low ebb in football matters. The next year Dr. Williams, who had been a great quarterback under Woodruff, was put at the helm. He went at his work quietly and without ostentation, and made himself famous the first year by holding Harvard to a 11-0 score and beating Cornell 12 to 11, after the Ithacans led by 11 to 0 at the close of the first half.
